Epiftles; yet the Cafe of thofe who are but Novices, and only begin to appear in Print, is far different: Thefe must of Neceffity implore the Patronage of fome great Perfon, the Veneration of whofe Character and Quality may ferve to protect them from publick Cenfure.

Such, My Lord, is my Cafe, who am accidentally become an Author; and it being my first Attempt, I consider'd that I durst not venture without à sufficient Protection. I needed not a Moment's Deliberation to know whom I should apply to for it. I am a Frenchman, and your Lordship one of the most Illuftrious of the Christian World : And although the most Noble Blood that flows in your Lordfhips fhip's Veins has form'd fo great a Vacuum between your Lordship and me, yet I am sensible that your Christian Charity has entirely fill'd it up, which makes your Lordship look upon all the French with a Brotherly Tenderness.

It was that which created fo much Zeal and Pity in your Lordship's Breast for their Sufferings, that you have neglected even your proper Interest to succour them in their Calamities; and have imploy'd the Advantage of that Access and Favour (which your high Birth and Merit have procur'd you with Crown'd Heads) rather for their Relief, than your own Advancement.

The Dedication.

Permit me, My Lord, to acknowledge to the World my felf to be of the Number of those who have received a chousand Proofs of your unparallell'd Generofity; and to acquaint all who shall read this Book, (to which, as the greatest Ornament imaginable 1 have taken the Liberty of prefixing your Lordship's most illustrious Name,) that I am very fenfible how dangerous a Trial I expose my felf to in dedicating it to a Perfon of fo great Sagacity, and fo penetrating a Genius. Most of the Countries, which I have herein described, are perfectly known to your Lordship by reafon of your many Travels thro' them, neither is your Idea of those Countries (wherein you have especially who intend to travel. And though I relate nothing but what I have feen, or taken out from approved Travellers, 'twould be a difficult Task to answer all the Obje-Stions that may be made against this Work, as to its Method and Stile. But I am refolv'd to let it go at a Venture, and take its Fate amongst the Criticks, without endeavouring to prevent their Censures: Therefore 1 Shall content my felf to tell them plainly, That they may lay afide my Book if they meet any Thing in it that offends them, being unconcern'd whether they approve or condemn it. Farewell.

TO THE TRAVELLER.

I S neceffary before your departure to make Provision of feveral Things better in England than any where elfe: Of a Pafs from the Secretary's Office, and of a Letter of Exchange, or rather of Credit. The Merchant or Banker to whom you are directed to, let him be in France, Holland, or any where elfe, having receiv'd your Letter will provide you with another, for a Correspondent in whatsoever Country you resolve to go to, and he will Counterbalance your Money according as the Change goes. Nevertheles, you must take Care at Venice, Rome, and Naples, when you receive any Money, not

REALE BREAK * A HEAR ARE MARCHINE AND A COMPANY CONCONCERNICON (CONCERNICON)

Set out from Chatillon fur Bez, a finall, but very plea-fant Town in the Province of Dauphiné in France, fi-tuate on the River Bez at the Foot of the Alps, fur-

rounded with a fingle Wall, and fortified with a very ftrong Caftle built upon a Rock joining the Town on the North Side, which was deftroy'd in the Civil Wars.

From which to Grenoble is counted Ten Leagues, the Way for the most Part being indifferent good. This is the Capital of the whole Province, feated in a fruitful Plain at the Foot of a Mountain, which produces excellent Wine. It is divided into two Parts by the River Ifere, being one of the moft pleafant Cities of the whole Kingdom. The Palace where the Parliament meets, and the Governor's Houfe, formerly belonging to the High Conftable Lefdiguieres, with the Cathedral Church, are worth a Traveller's View, as well as Vigile, Giere, La Grand Chartreufe, and feveral other remarkable Curiofities, not above half a Day's Journey from the City.

Seven Leagues from this is Montmeillan, a fmall, but firong Place, guarded by a Citadel which covers the Top of a Hill almoft inacceffible: It flands on a Rock, in which a large Well is cut to furnish the Garrison with fresh Water. The French became Masters of it in 1705, after a long Blocade, and blew up its Fortifications both natural and artificial.

From thence there is Six Leagues to Chamberry, the Metropolis of the Dutchy of Savoy; Sixty fix Miles from Turin: It is a rich, populous, and well built City, feated in a Plain near the Confluence of two finall Rivers.

The Duke is filled particularly Duke of Savay, Geneva, & c. Prince of Piedment, Perpetual Vicar of the Empire in Kaly, King of Cyprins, and now, by the late Peace at Utreebt, King of Sicily. He always wore a Royal Crown, had the Title of Royal Highness, and and took Place after Kings. His eldeft Son is called the Prince Royal of Piedmont. The youngeft Sons cannot fucceed the eldeft, in cafe he has Male lifue, but have Appennages allow'd them, and the Salic Law excludes Females as in France. His Government is abfolute; neither is he oblig'd to call any Parliament, or Affembly of States: And though he be a Member of the Empire, he is without Controul in his own Dominions. The Government is adminifter'd by a Council of State, wherein he prefides: Next to him fits the Princes of the Blood, Six Councellors of State, the Chief Secretary, the Clerk, and a few other Officers.

GENEVOIS.

The chief City of the Territory of Geneva is Annecy, feated on a Lake of the fame Name, about Twenty Miles diftant from Geneva, and Twenty four from Chambery. Several finall Streams flowing from the Lake divide the Town into divers Parts. The Ticular Biffiops of Geneva refide here fince their Expulsion in the Yeat 1535.

GENEVA.

This City flands on the Rhone, which comes ont of Lacus Lemanns, or the Lake of Geneva. It is a noted City, and famous for preferving its Liberty against the feveral Attempts of Savoy and France fince the Year B 2 1518.

1518. It is well fortified, chiefly on the Side of Savey: The Walls are flrong, well lin'd; and their Guards always on Dury, becaule of the conftant Danger apprehended from France and Savey. The Arlenal is extraordinary well furnish'd with Arms both defensive and offensive. It is a Place of mighty Trade; and fo populous, that it is thought to contain at least 40000 Souls, whereof 6000 are Refugees. But the chief Strength of this City confists in a firm Alliance with the Swifs Cantons of Zurick and Bern.

SWITZERLAND.

From hence to Morges upon the Lake of Geneva is Four Miles. 'Tis a finall, but very pleafant Town, about Four Miles South Weft from Laufane, being well built, and Capital of a Bailiwick.

Laufane stands upon two Hills, within a Mile and a half of the Lake, the Country about it being very fruitful. The Cathedral is a noble Structure, dedicated to the Virgin, now made use of by the Protestants. The Town is divided into Old and New; the former enjoys great Privileges, among others the Jurifdiction of Life and Death.

From Laufane to Zurich there is two Roads, the first by Modon five Leagues from it, from whence there is four Leagues to Payerne; and from that to Rern Eleven Leagues. This is the powerfullest City in Switzerland, very well well built. ' It is feated on a rifing Ground about a League in Length, confifting of three broad Streets, most 'of the Houses, which are of hew'n Stone, have very pleafant Piazza's. It is encompass'd on three Sides by the River Aar, from whence there is a Stream let into each Street, which supplies the City with Water, and keeps it clean. The Cathedral, Town-house, Arfenal, and Library, are noble Structures. In the Church of the Dominicans they preferve fome Monuments of the cheating Vision which the Jacobite Friers used to support their Controversies with the Dominicans.

From Bern to Arber by Water is fix Leagues, from thence to Pibreftey one League, thence to Lengsburg fix Leagues, from whence to Brough three Leagues, to Bade three Leagues more, thence to Odelfingue one League, and laftly, from this to Zurich five Leagues.

The fecond Way from Laufane to Zurich is by Couper, a pretty little Town belong-ing to Bern. It has the Title of a Barony, and is adorn'd with a very good Caffle. It ftands about ten Miles North-East from Geneva : All the Inhabitants are Protestants.

Vevey, the Capital of a Bailiwick, in which lies the strong Fortress of Zilan, is a pleasant little Town, Twelve Miles South-East from Laufane.

Friburg is the Seat of the Bishop of Lau-Sane, well built, and tolerably fortified, divided into four Parts, each of which has its Standard-bearer. If the Debtor don't pay B 2 here here at the Day appointed, the Creditor fends two or more of his Servants and Horfes to a publiek Inn, where the Debtor is oblig'd to maintain them till he fatisfies the Creditor. The most remarkable Things in: this City are the Piazza's, the Cathedral with its high Altar, the Town-house, a high Tower, a noble publick Fountain, and a Commendary of Malta.

Iverdon is a finall Town, but of a confiderable Trade, on the South-Weft of the Lake Newenburg, about two Miles North from Laufane. It is well built, the Streets neat, with a ftrong Caftle in the Suburbs. There are a vaft many pleafant little Houfes about it.

Morat, a little Town on the South-East of the faid Lake, famous for the great Vidory obtain'd here by the Switzers over Charles the Terrible, or the Warlike Duke. of Eurgundy, in Remembrance of which they built a Chapel in the Place of Battle, where the Bones of many Thousands of his. Men who were flain there are to be feen.

Granfan; on the fame Lake about three Miles from Iverdon, is famous for another memorable Victory obtain'd over the faid Duke by the Switzers in 1476. All along the Lake the Hills are cover'd with Vineyards, which afford excellent Wine, Corn, and Pathures, for the Space of Twenty four Miles in Length, and as many in Breadth. Neuchatel flands on the End of the Lake of the fame Name, about Twenty two Miles North-Weft from Bern. It is defended by a good Caffle, formerly larger than at prefent, as appears by its Ruins. Tis the chief Ornament, and the Searof a Prince: It has, a Tower which commands the Town and the neighbouring Villages. The Houfes, are well built, and there are many clear Fountains in it. It belongs now to the King of Pruffia, govetn'd by twelve Judges, four for the Nobility, four for the Officers, and as many for the third State.

Miles

call'd, is divided into two unequal Parts by the River Limagus; or Limat, join'd by Bridges, where there are feveral Things worth a Traveller's View, The Fortifications, which are very pleafant ; the Houfes, the built with Timber and Clay, are lefty, and handfomely painted ; the Streets, though narrow, pav'd, and very clean; and the whole liown furrounded with a ftrong Wall, and many Outworks of Earth after the modern Failmon. They have an Engine to draw Water put of the Lake, and convey it through the City. There is allo a large Drinking Hall, with Tables for the feveral Tindes, where they meet every Day at twoia Clock at the Ring ing of a great Bell. The Lake, called Zo rich Sea, adjoining to the Town, is Twenty four Miles long, and about three broade Both Sides are adorn'd with Orchards, Vincyards, Meadows, flately Houfes, and many Villages, cipecially towards the East, where they have the beft Wine The Reforma-B 4 tion tion was introduced here by Zuinglius, a Canon of their great Church.

-From thence to Ceib are 4 Leagues, thence to Berlick half a League, and from that Place to Eglisean 4 Leagues and a half; you travel all the Way by Post-Chariot. There is another Way from Zurieb to Shaffhouse by Baste or Basil on the Rhine, Capital of the Canton of that Name; it is divided by the · River into two Parts, join'd by a Noble Stone-Bridge of 14 Arches, being 350 Paces long. The Bishop at the Reformation was laid afide, and has ever fince kept his Seat at Porentru in Upper Alfatia ; he hasno Jurifdiction in the City, nor is he allow'd to lodge in it : There is a College founded by Erafmus, who lies interr'd in the great Church, where his Monument is to be feen near the Communion-Table'; his Bibliotheca Ambulachiana is likewife kept'in this Church, wherein are many curious Pieces of Painting, his Seal. and Ring; in his Cabinet there are twenty Original Pieces; for that which reprefents the Pallion of our Saviour, were offer'd 1000 Ducats of Gold. There are besides in it Four Series's of Medals Greek, Confular, Gold and Brafs Imperial; among the Gold ones, that of Plotina the Emperor Trajan's Wife is most esteem'd. Under Erafmus's Picture there is the following Epigram. Ingens ingentem, quem personat orbis Erafmum, Hic tibi dimidium pitta tabella refert. At cur non totum? mirari define Lector, Integra non totum terra nec ipfa capit. Z

Zug

Zug is feated on a Hill near the East-fide of a Lake of the fame Name, about 7 Miles long; its Situation makes the Town very strong, having the Lake before it, Mountains on both Sides, and fruitful Fields behind it.

Lucern, fituate on each Side of the Ruffe. iffuing out of the Lake of Lucern, is in the Country commonly call'd the Valley of the Vaudois, whom the Duke of Savoy has perfecuted with fo much Rigour in the Year 1688. They endur'd great Mifery on the Account of their Religion, and were fore'd to fly. into Switzerland, where they form'd a Body; and in 1689. invaded Savoy; in 1690. they were reftor'd to their Privileges by the Mediation of William the 3d King of England; but after the Treaty at Turin in 1696. the Duke renew'd his former Severity, which continued till 1703. when he encouraged them to take up Arms against the French, and granted them their Liberties again.

Switz lies in a Valley furrounded with Hills, for the most Part cover'd with Snow; it was formerly fortified, and an Imperial City, but now only a large Village on the Banks of the River Meule near the Lake of Lucern. The Inhabitants are very Brave, and have the Honour of giving the Name of Switzers to the rest of the three Cantons, by Reason one of them call'd William Tell, was the first who took up Arms for the Liberty of his. Country; this Man being one of the the Chief of the Town of Switz, and refuting to obey the Tyrannical Commands of the German Governour, was feiz'd, and condemned either to die, or to fhoot with an Arrow at an Apple fet on his Son's Head, who was bound to a Tree ; which he perform'd fo skilfully that he cleft the Apple in two, without hurting the Lad. The Governour perceiving he had another Arrow in his Quiver, ask'd him, What he defign'd to do with it? He boldly reply'd, To kill you, Tyrant, if I had either mils'd the Apple or flain my Son : Whereupon he was fent in a Boat Prisoner to the Caltle of Hapsburg; but coming near the Shore he leap'd out of the Boat into the Lake, and fav'd himfelf by Swimming : He foon after accomplish'd his Defign of killing the Tyrant, and immediately went to Uri, where he perfuaded 'his Countrymen to take up Arms, and fhake off the Austrian Yoke.

Altorf, near the Lake of Lucern, has no Walls, but is a well-built Town, the Streets neatly pav'd, and many Houfes and Gardens are round it, which renders it very pleafant. It is of a very difficult Access, being fo environ'd with Hills that there is no approaching it but by the Lake, or by the dangerous Paffes of Mount St. Gotbard.

Claris or Glaris, is the Capital of the Canton that bears its Name; it is likewife enclos'd with Mountains, the Inhabitants being a Mixture of Papifts and Protestants: No Cafe is decided, except it be agreed to by two two Thirds of the Defendant's Religion' This Canton fends Governours once in three Years to Werdenburg, and have joint-Power with the Canton of Switz, over Urenal and Guftal.

Coir, the chief and only fortify'd Town of the Grifons, is the Seat of a Bifhop, who is a Prince of the Empire, but his Revenues are very fmall, his Court mean; he had fome Jurifdiction over the City before the Reformation, but now has only his Palace, the Cathedral and fome Houfes about it for the Canons. All the better fort of the Inhabitants are Protestants, very few Papifts are admitted to be Magistrates; most Perfons of Quality and Estates in the Values are Protestants, and have Churches in the Principal Towns.

Appenzel: is very rich and populous, the Majority of the People Protestants, the reft Papifts, but their Magistrates are indifferently chose out of both Religions. They have Twelve Jurisdictions under them, divided into the Interior and Exterior Appenzels, and Eight confiderable Villages with Churches in each.

Shafhouse is a Frontier Town of that Country towards Suabia, ftanding Four Miles North-Weft from Constance, and is the Metropolis of one of the Cantons. The Inhabitants join'd in a League for the Prefervation of their Liberties, with Zurieb and St. Gal, in the Year 1424, which they did with the other Cantons in 1454, and confirm'd it with a perpetual tual League in 1501. And laftly, they embrac'd the Reformation in 1529, having burnt the vaft Statue call'd the great God of Shafhoufe.

Switzerland in general is a large Common-wealth confifting of Thirteen Cantons, every one being absolute within its own Jurifdiction; fo that they are fo many independant Republicks, but confederate together for their mutual Defence, under a popular Government, though not ftrictly fo in respect of every particular Canton; for those of Zurich, Bern, Baste, Shafhousse, Lucern, Friburg, and Soleure, are in some Manner Aristocia-tical, none but the Burghers of the Capital Cities being admitted 'to have any Share in the Government; whereas those of Uri, Switz, Underwald, Glaris, Zug and Appenzel, are merely Democratical; and all the Inhabitants of the Villages as well as of the Towns are admitted to the Government. Their General Diets meet annually about Midsummer at Baden; they confist of Two Deputies from each Canton; those of Zurich have the Precedency, and the eldeft of their Two Deputies presides.

The Catholick Cantons hold their particular Diets at Lucern, and the Proteftant Cantons at Araw. Justice is administred here with great Exactness and Equity: Matters are determin'd generally according to the Rules of Sense and Right; fome according to Custom: If any new Thinghappens, it is decided according to the Relation it it has to other Cafes; which being once adjudged, flands as a President, and a Law for the Time to come.

The Country is well defended by Nature, which plac'd fo many high and inacceffible Mountains round it, that there is but Four Paffes to enter it by, which a finall Handful of Men may eafily defend againft the greateft Armies. The firft by the Way of the Lake of Como in Italy: The fecond by the Valley of Commonica from the Dominions of Venice: The third by the Valley of the Inn from the Country of Tirol: And the fourth into Switzerland and Suabia by a Bridge. over the Rhine near Coir.

From Shafbouse to Stutgart or Stutguard, in the Country of Wirtenberg, is counted Thirty-Leagues, scil. to Engue 4 Leagues, to Dorlingue 4, to Balingue 8, to Tubingue 7, and to Stutguard 7.

There is another Way by Constance, which ftands on the Lake of that Name; otherwife call'd Boden-Sea; 'tis under the Emperor's Protection, who keeps a Garifon in it, and a Governour under the Title of Protector. It is very ftrong, populous, and enrich'd with great Trade by the Lake. The Houfes fair, the Churches magnificent, the Bishop's Palace very stately, many publick Edifices: Famous for the General Council held there in the Year 1414, which lasted feveral Years, in it three Popes were depos'd and a new one elected in their Place: In this alfo fohn Has and Jerome of Prague were con-condemned to be burnt, and accordingly executed. The Bishop is Count of the Empire, and Lord of 1000 Castles and Villages.

Furstenburg, the Head City of a Principality of the fame Name on both Sides of the Danube, 20 Miles North from Shafbousse. This Principality, with the County of Rheinfelden, contains the Black Forest, being Part of the Famous Hyrcinian Wood.

Stelhoffen, a fortify'd Town upon the East Side of the Rhine in the Marquifate of Baden, 17 Miles North-East from Strasburg.

Friburg, is a pretty large City very well fortify'd, reftor'd to the Emperor by the Peace at Refwick.

Brifac is the chief Town of Brifgow, Eaftward of the Black Foreft, Part of which is fubject to the Emperor, and the other to the Family of Baden. The Town ftands on the Rbine being join'd by Bridges to two or three Islands as well fortify'd as the Town.

Strasburg is feated on the two Rivers, Ill and Burgh, which fall a little lower into the Rhine, 46 Miles South-Weft from Philisburg, 33 North from Brifac, and 14 South from Haguenau, a large; rich and populous City in a pleafant Plain : It was formerly Imperial, govern'd by its own Magistrates from the Time it embrac'd the Reformation, wiz-1639. till the French furpriz'd it in Time of Peace, Anno 1681. and alter'd the Government thereof. 'Tis adorn'd with many flately Buildings, the Town-house, Airfenal, and Ca-

Cathedral, are chiefly remarkable; the laft has a Tower of a Pyramidical Form 575 Foor high, and in it an admirable Clock. The City is very ftrongly fortify'd.

Huningen is an extraordinary good Fortrefs. built not many Years fince by the French King; 2 Miles North from Bafle in Switzerland, 20 Miles South from Brifac, and 54. South of Strasburg. It was demolifhed by the Peace at Refavick.

Ulm in Suabia, is fituate on the meeting of the Blave, Iler and Danube, (where the latter begins to be navigable) 40 Miles West by North from Augsburg : It is a rich, large, populous and ftrong City, adorn'd with many flately Edifices, particularly the Cathedral, extoll'd beyond any in Germany. The Papifts are allow'd two Churches, but are excluded from the Council.

Sturguard (on the Weft of the Neckar) is the Metropolis of Wirtemberg, adorn'd with a flately Caftle (in which the Duke refides) fine Gardens, Grotto's and Water-works; famous for its Bathsmuch reforted to, feated in a very fertile and populous Country, full of Citics and Villages: The Soil partly mountainous, which produces good Wine; partly flat and extream fertile in Corn, &c.

From this Place to Brachman are 7 Miles; from that to Stetin 6, from whence to Villoc 4, thence to. Heidelberg 5. There is another Way about from Stutguard to Heidelberg by: Span, a near Village in the Forest of Arden; feated in a Bottom, encompass'd on all Sides - with with Hills, which on the North are very fteep, protected by all the neighbouring Princes, being a beneficial Place to Mankind by Reafon of the wholfommels of its Waters.

Montroyal on the Mofelle, has a ftrong Cittadel and Outworks, which, together with its Situation and a Peninfula, form'd by the River, render'd it impregnable; but it was demolifh'd by the Peace at Refwick.

Nancy, the Capital of Lorrain, is feated in the middle of that Dukedom, 155 Miles directly from Paris, 60 from Strasburg to the Weft, and 30 from Metz to the South; divided into Old and New: The Duke's Palace and Magazine stands in the former, and the latter contains many fine Buildings. It was furrendred by the French to the Duke of Lorrain by the Peace at Refwick, but the Fortifications were demolish'd.

Philisburg or Philipsburg, in the Palatinate of Rhine, is the ftrongest Fortress of the Country, situate Eastward of the Rhine in a Plain not very fertile, surrounded with Marshes, taken by the French in 1688, but restor'd to the Germans by the Peace at Refwick.

Straubing, a handfom wall'd Town belonging to the Duke of Bavaria, the Streets are ftreight and very clean; there is a Tower in the Market-place painted all over with Green and Gold Colour, and a Bridge of Wood over the Danube.

Landau, an important Fortress on the Borders of the Palatinate of the Rhine, not very large, but strongly fortified, 14 Miles from Philipsburg. The French put all the Plunder they took out of the Palatinate in 1688. into this Place, which by accidental Fire was all destroy'd the next Year. It was taken by the Germans, but retaken by the French the 9th of September 1713.

Spire, a very ancient City, large and populous, the Cathedral very handfom with four large Towers; the Papifts, Lutherans and Calvinifts preach in it alternatively.

Heidelberg, Capital of the Palatinate of the Rhine, is feated in a fruitful Plain at the Foot of a Mountain, 12 Miles East from Manheim, adorn'd with a magnificent Caftle, the Prince's Palace; in it there is a very great Tower, within which is a Theatre for Comedies; near it are very handfom Gardens, especially that in the Ditch; the Cellars are fill'd with Veffels of extraordinary Sizes: The great Tun is kept in a particular Building, and holds 200 Tuns English Meafurc. The great Church of the Holy Ghoft was remarkable for the famous Library kept in it, transported to Rome by the Spaniards. The French Calvinists have a Church here, call'd La Providence, from the Elector's Motto, Deus providebis. In the Town-house is a Clock very curious for its clivers Motions; but most of the Cyriosities of this City were defac'd by the French in 1688, of #

Manheim

Manheim, formerly a Village, but now a wall'd Town, much encreas'd; all the Streets are large and uniform: Here is a noble Cirtadel; on the Right Hand are three Pavillions for Lodgings; the fix Bridges of the Moat are very remarkable, there were Pallifadoes all along the Bottom in the middle of the Ditch, and upon the Splanade when I was there, but the French deftroy'd all in 1688, not excepting the Elector's Palace.

Morkendal, is the Seat of the great Mafter of the Teutonick Order, well built, with fair Piazza's, a large Fountain with a Statue of one of the great Mafters, and a long Corrider from his Palace.

Franckfurt upon the River Mein in Franconia, is a large, well fortified City, divided into two Parts by the River, having a Stone-Bridge of 12 or 14 Arches, a Place of valt Trade, famous for the Election of the Emperors, which by the Laws of the Golden Bull, ought always to be made there. There are two great Fairs held there in March and September, to which there is a wonderful Concourse of People from remote Parts; moft of the Inhabitants are Lutherans. There is an Houfe anciently belonging to the Teutonick Order, that has the Privilege of Sanctuary for Murderers and Bankrupts, for the Space of 14 Days. The Fountains and Houfes are very handfome : We came to this Place in a Coach from Shafboufe for 36 Dollars each, but one may return much cheaper.

From

From Franckfurt to Mente is 8 Miles by Water, the Price for each Perfon is ordinary. The River Mein falls into the Rhine about a Musket-fhot above the City. From this to Caup is counted 5 Miles; in the Road you go through a pretty confiderable Place call'd Falx : From Caup to Vefel 2 Miles; below this Place is the Fortrefs of Chomberg.

The City of Menter is feated in a Country abounding with all Sorts of Provisions, efpecially good Wine: The Place is ftrong and well guarded; the Buildings are fair, but the Narrownels of the Streets, and many old Houfes hides the Beauty of the City.

Coblentz is fituate at the Confluence of the two great Rivers of Rbine and Mofelle, in a pleafant and fruitful Country cover'd with Vines. The City is large, and of a Triangular Form, two Sides being feenr'd by the Rivers, and the third by ftrong Fortifications in a Line drawn from one River to the other, after the modern Way: It has a Bridge over the Mofelle, with a Fort of three Baftions on the other Side to guard it, and another upon the Rhine. On the Eaft Bank of the Rhine lies the almost impregnable Fort call'd Hermanstein, on the Top of a fteep rocky Hill twice as high as Windfor-Caffle, which commands the Ciry and the two Rivers. At the Foot of the Hill upon the Banks of the Rhine flands a very Noble Palace, having two large Wings on the Front, with five Pavilions flanding towards the River; from which there is a long Bridge of Boars over over the Rhine to Cohlentz; all belong to the Archbishop of Triers: From this City to Bonne is 8 Miles, and from thence 8 Miles and a half more to Colen, one of the largest Citics of Germany, fecur'd towards the Land by a high Wall and two deep Trenches; and towards the Water by a ftrong Stone-Wall : The Rhine renders it delightful on one Side, and divers Rows of Trees on the other. There are fome Out-works, but the best Security is the great Number of Inhabitants. The Churches are very many, whercof the moftremarkable are, that of St. Kunibald, St. Gerron, the Dominicans, the Carmelites, that of Santta Urfula, confiderable not only for her fine Tomb of Marble, but also for the Story of the Martyrdom of the 11000 Virgins by the Huns. Upon St. Urfula's Tomb is this Infcription.

> Sepulchrum Sanctæ Urfulæ Indicio Columbæ detectum.

There are to be feen many fair Monuments of Noblemen in Brafs and Stone: The Senate-houfe is very fine, with a beautiful Tower belonging to it.

They count from thence to Vefel 18 Miles, from whence (leaving Cleves on the Left) there are to Nimeguen 4 Miles; thence to Vomel (leaving Grave on the Left) 11 Miles, thence to Dort 6 Miles, and as many from Dort to Rotterdam.

There

There is a Way from Colen to Baccharack, a Town belonging to the Elector Palatine, famous for excellent Wines. We pass'd by an old Caftle feated upon a Rock in the middle of the Rhine, of an irregular Form, call'd Phalx, where formerly the Palatine Princes were born, the Princeffes being fent thither to be delivered.

The next Day we went by a dangerous Paffage where there are many hidden Rocks under Water, which caufe a great Rapidity of the Stream. A little above this there is a round Tower upon a Rock in the Rhine, call'd Mousfe-Tower, built by Hatto Archbishop of Mentz, above 900 Years ago, who in Time of great Famine, (under Pretence of relieving the Poor who were ftarving) invited them all into a very large Barn, where having lock'd them in, he let Fire to it, and burn'd those miserable Creatures, saying, they were like Rats and Mice, always de-vouring, but never fatiated. After which he was fo perfecuted by that Sort of Vermin, that to avoid them, he caufed this Tower to be built; yet this did not avail him, for they followed him thither, and at last devour'd him.

The Emperor files himfelf, By the Grace of God, Emperor of the Romans, always Auguft, &c. He can confer Honours, create Princes, affranchife Cities, and fuch-like : But as to the Legiflative Power, and levying of Taxes on the whole Empire, it is wholly lodg'd in the General Diets conjointly with C 2 him; him; and by a late Capitulation he is not to enter into Alliance, or make War with any Foreign Prince, without the Confent of the Electors.

He is address'd unto by the August Title of Cafar, and the Embaffadors of Crown'd Heads and Free States in Europe, give Place to those fent by him in any Foreign Court. The two Heads of the Eagle in his Arms, fignific the Eaftern and Western Empire. By the Laws of the Empire for Treafon and high Crimes, the Hands of the Malefactor are first cat off, then his Head. Here is a Toleration for the publick Exercife of three Religions, viz. the Lutheran, Calvinift and Papift ; and in fome Places all the three Sects celebrate Divine Service in the fame Church at different Times of the Day; as at Manbeim in the Palatinate before it was ruin'd by the French.

The Electors at prefent are, First, The Archbishop of Mentz, Great Chancellor of the Empire in Germany ; he fits on the Em-' peror's Right Hand in the Diets, and did formerly crown the King of Bohemia. 2d. The Archbishop of Treves, Great Chancellor of the Empire in France ; he claims the first Vote in chuing the King of the Romans, or rather in electing the Emperor, and fits over against him in the Diets. 2d. The Archhilhop of Colen. 4th. The King of Bobemia. 5th The Duke of Bavaria. 6th The Duke of Saxony. 7th The Marquils of Brandenburg, now King of Prufia. 8th. The Prince Palz-3

Palatine of the Rhine. 9th The Duke of *Han*nover, added to the Electoral College in the Year 1692.

These have much greater Authority, and enjoy more ample Privileges, than the other Princes of the Empire : When the Emperor calls a Diet, he is oblig'd to ask their Advice. The Electors have Power to chuse and dethrone Emperors when they judge it neceffary for the good of the Empire: They take Places in all publick Affemblies by the Golden Bull before any other Prince of the Empire: They make and annul Laws for the Empire, without the Emperor's Confent, to that the Chamber of Spires is 'oblig'd to fubmit to their Decisions, though against Common Law, They make Warand Leagues with Foreign Princes without the Emperor, and treat with him as their Equal; neither do they ever ask Pardon of him for Acts of Hoftility; they judge decifively without Appeal; they give Difpensations for Marriages within the Degrees prohibited by Canon-Law; they make what Change in Religion they pleafe within their own Ferritories.

When the Electors have agreed on the Place of Coronation, the Elector of Mentz, orders the Magistrates of Nurenberg, who keeps the Regalia, to fend them to the Place. The Electors, or their Ambassfadors, attend the Emperor from his Palace to the Church in their Electoral Robes.

The

The Elector Palatine carries the Crown, that of Bavaria the Globe, of Brandenburg the Scepter, all marching in a Breaft; that of Saxony the Sword, and that of Hanover the Standard : After them comes the Emperor alone with his Retinue following him; ar the Door of the Church he is receiv'd by the Ecclesiaftical Electors in their Robes, who conduct him to the Altar, where the Archbishop that officiates, being in his Pontificals, anoints his Head, betwixt his Shoulders, his Neck, Breaft, Right Arm, and the Palm of his Right Hand: This they call his Confecration.

Many Abbots and Abbeffes have an abfolute Power in the Temporality of their Benefices, govern the People fubject to them as Sovereign Princes, without any Cognizance of an higher Power, having the fame Sovereignty over their Subjects as the Secular Princes have.

The Free Cities are either Imperial or Hans-Towns; imperial are those who bear the Eagle of the Empire in their Arms, and have Right to fend their Deputies to the Diets of the Empire.

Hans-Towns are those which towards the End of the thirtcenth Century, entred into a firm League of Mutually affisting one another in Distress; as also in carrying on fuch a regular Commerce, as may univerfally tend to their Advantage, and the publick Good of the Empire; which Society by Degrees encreas'd to the Number of 80 Cities.

ties, who enjoy'd great Privileges, and exercifed a peculiar Jurifdiction among themfelves; for the better Administration of which they were divided into Four Circles, diffinguish'd by the Name of Four principal Cities, in which were establish'd their Courts of Judicature, viz. Lubeck, Colen, Brunswick, and Dantzick; but this Society has been on the declining Hand these two hundred Years past, and is now become very inconfiderable.

In particular Courts they follow the Laws of the Empire, confifting in many ancient Conflictutions, wiz. the Golden Bull, the Pacification of Passaw, the Treaty of Westphalia, and the Roman Law by the Emperor Justinian.

The Title of King of the Romans is given to those that are defign'd to succeed in the Empire, and are chosen in the fame Manner as the Emperors, by the Golden Bull; they have for their Arms an Eagle with one Head only ; whereas the Emperor's Eagle has two fince the House of Austria succeeded to Spain. The King of the Romans is only call'd Auguftus, but the Emperor Semper Augustus; and . calls the King, Our Beloved, but the King gives him the Title of Majefty. In the Ablence of the Emperor the King has the Ad-" ministration of the Empire. It was agreed at the League of Smalkald, after the Duke of Saxony and others had protested against the Emperor, for procuring his eldeft Son to be chosen King of the Romans (as contrary to the

the Golden Bull 1 that no King of the Romans fhould be chosen during the Emperor's Life, unless the Electors should agree on it before-hand, as necessary for the Good of the Empire; and that they may also chuse a King of the Romans without the Emperor's Confent.

Aix la Chapelle, is fo call'd (to diffinguish it from Aix in Provence) from a Chapel in the great Church much visited by Pilgrims, and famous for the great Number of Relicks preferv'd therein. It is an open neuter Place, the Senate-house is all built with Free-stone, and adorn'd with the Statues of Emperors; the first and fecond Story are divided into Apartments, but the third is all one intire Hall 162 Foot long, 60 broad, and well painted; there are two Pieces very much esteem'd, one of the Refurrection, and the other of Charles the Great giving a Charter to this City.

Among the Multitude of Relicks and Curiofities in the great Church, there is (as they fay) fome of the bleffed Virgin's Hair, a Link of the Chain St. Peter was chain'd with in Prifon; the Head of Charles the Great, fome Bones of his Arm, his Sword which the Emperors wear at their Coronation; the Picture of the Virgin Mary and our Saviour in her Arms, embofs'd upon a Jafper-Stone, done by St. Luke, hang'd about the Neck of Charles the Great, and fo found in his Tomb, a fine Manuscript of the Gofpel found in the fame Place; our Saviour's Girdle of Leather, with with the Seal of Constantine the Great on each End, a Piece of the true Manna, &c.

There are many Baths about the City, efpecially towards Limburg, not very hot indeed, but of a Smell fomewhat offensive; the hot Baths within the inward Wall are very much frequented at prefent, there are three very convenient ones, viz. the Emperor's, St. Quirin's, and the little one.

Limburg the chief City of the Province, is feated on a Rock, which over-looks all the Country round about, at the Bottom of which runs the River Wefdo: It is a finall Place confifting chiefly of one broad, but fhort Street, encompais'd only with a ftrong Wall and a Trench; the Accefs on one Side mighty difficult, lying all along upon the Edge of the Rock from one Side to the other. The Houfes, for the moft Part, are Wood. Over the Gate of the Town is the Governour's Lodgings, which commands the whole Paffage.

Liege is the Capital of the Province fo call'd, feated in a pleafant Valley furrounded with Hills, the River Maefe enters it in two Branches; three other fmall Rivers flowing from the Foreft of Ardennes, and forming many pleafant Islands, fall here into the Maefe. The City is above Four Miles in Circuit, the Houfes, for the moft Part, of Wood, fome cover'd with Boards, and fome with Slate: The Streets neither broad, not cleanly kept: On the Brow of a Hill that hangs over it, ftands a Citadel of great Strength, Strength, which commands the Town: There is a Famous University endow'd with large Ecclefiastical Revenues, there is alfo Eight Collegiate, and Thirty-two Parochial Churches, which are most stately. The Bridges are very handlome, whereof that which is over the Maeje is very broad and stately. Here are Thirty-two Companies of Freemen, among whom the Goldsmiths have the Preeminence.

Maestricht is a very strong City upon the Maefe Four Leagues below Liege, fubject to the Hollanders, the Out-works very confiderable, but the Wall is old ; towards the East there is a Hill, which rifing gently, overlooks Part of the Town, under which is one of the Noblest Stone-Quarries in the World; there is a Horn-Work about a Musket-fhot from the Hill, and a Bastion answering it, fo very high that it covers the Town. On the other Side of the River stands Wick, a very ftrong Place join'd to Maestricht by a handfom Bridge of Nine Arches. The Townhoufe, which is very flately, flands in one of the Piazza's; in another the great Church with a fine Fountain and a Row of Trees: Here are about twenty Monasteries, three Dutch Churches, and one common to the English and French.

Dunkirk is mighty confiderable for the Strength and Regularity of its Fortifications, befides its Risban on the Sca beyond the old Town, cut for a Mile through the Splinter-Sands, which at high Water is capable of teceiving One hundred fifty First Rate Men of War. On the Weft Side of the Harbour 15 is rais'd a valt plank'd Work to lodge the Sand, and to clean the Risban. The Baflion toward the North is most stately, the City well built and populous, the Streets very neat and regular. Here is a famous English Nunnery, and a Cloisster for the Franci/cans of both Sexes At the Mouth of the Harbour stands a strong Castle, on which are planted Two hundred Pieces of Ordnance. It stands Fifty four Mites West from Gbint.

Graveling is a very pretty handfome Town; the Works of Earth, but large and high; the Church flately; the Streets bread, but the Houfes low; and the Town not populous.

In Newpert likewife the Houfes are generally low built, and for the most Part of Timber. It is a Place of very good Strength, having a ftrong Castle. The Streets are broad. The Inhabitants maintain themselves chiefly by the Fishing Trade. It is Forty Miles diftant towards the West from Ghent.

Oftende is feated on a Point of Land reaching into the Sea, which walkes it on one Side continually. The Ground on which it flands is Moorifh, and interfected with leveral Chanels. In full Tide the Town feems rather to be buried than feated on the Sea : But the Fortifications are fo regular, that it is counted one of the ftrongeft Places in the Netherlands. It has a fale and capacious Harbour, well defended, and capable of receiving Ships of the greateft Burthen. The Buildings Buildings not high, but handfome and uniform: The Streets regular and well paved, by reafon they were built much about the fame Time. It is Thirty fix Miles almost West from Gbent, and Ten from Bruges.

Bruges is a very large City in a fruitful and pleafant Country, exceeding neat, tolerable populous, and very well built. The artificial Canals of Water from this to all Places, make it of very eafy Accefs. Many of the Houfes are Five and Six Stories high. The Market-Place is in the Center, where Six of the principal Streets, running from as many of the chief Gates, are terminated. Here are Seven Parifh Chutches, Sixty Religious Houfes, Three Colleges, whereof that of the Jefuits is the fineft. It flands Twenty four Miles almost Weft of Ghent.

Oudenarde is feated upon the Scheld: One of the prettieft Towns in those Parts for Situation, Traffick, and Number of Inhabitants; defended by a Caftle joining the Town with a Bridge: But a high Hill that commands the Town hindets it from being ftrong. It is Sixteen Miles South from Gbent.

Ghent is the largeft City of the Netherlands, being Seven Miles in Compafs, feated on the Banks of the Scheld and the Ley, or Lie, which runs through it, and divide it into Twenty fix Iflands join'd together with Ninety eight Bridges, well wall'd and trench'd about. The private Buildings are for the most Part ftately, the Streets handfome and clean, the whole whole Town well built. It has Seven Churches, Fifty five Religious Houfes, befides a Cloifter of Englifh Nuns, and that of the Jefuits, which is the moft beautiful. The Cathedral is a fine Structure; the Tower belonging to it gives a fine Prospect round about, being above Four hundred Steps high. The Caftle, which is a Royal Palace, contains One hundred Chambers. The Citadel confifts of Four very little Baftions. Among the Piazza's there is one very large, in which ftands a great gilded Statue of the Emperor Charles the Fifth.

Fleffingue has a ftrong Stone Wall towards the Sea, and Earth-Works towards the Land. It is ftrong, and has a good Port. The Town-house is handfomely built, standing in the Piazza, having Three Rows of Pillars in the Front, one above another, the lower of the Dorick Order, the fecond of the Ionick, the third of the Corinthian; and on the Top is a Balcony to discover the Ships at Sea. From hence we return'd to Middleburg, and pass'd down the River by the Fort Rammakins near the Scheld, failing till we pass'd the Fort Frederick Henrick, and came to Lillo, over which lies another Fortification call'd Filgens-Hock. The Fort de la Croix is the last belonging to the Hollanders, and lies on the North Side of the River. The Banks are cut nigh it, and the Country drown'd for the greater Security. The Spanish Forts hereabours, to defend the Frontiers, are the Philip, the Pearl, and the Maria.

Mid-

44. A Nem Journey over Europc.

Middleburg is almoft in the Middle of the Ifland Valuchria, well huilt, large, and populous. There are many remarkable Churches: The new one is of an Octogone Form, with a pretty Cupulo: The Tower of the old grear Church is very high; the Statues of an ancient Form about the Town-Houfe reremarkable; the round Piazza's, and many private Buildings, confiderable; and the whole Country round it very fruitful, adorned with Gardens, Orchards, pleafant Fields of Corn, and Meadows.

Rotterdam is a very large and populous City; the Houfes well built; fome of the Streets too narrow, but clean, and pav'd commonly with Brick fet Edge-ways. Here is a very fine Key, into which Ships of great Burden are receiv'd, as well as into many Streets, their Chanels being deep and large. The Organs of the great Church are very fine, the Tower of an extraordinary Height, the Monument of De Wit is to be feen in the fame Church. The Statue of Erafmus upon the Bridge, the Houfe wherein he was born, and the States Pleafure-Boats, are all worth feeing.

Dort is the chiefest Town of South Holland for Antiquity and Privileges. It has a Mint, and is the Staple for Rhenish Wines and English Cluth. Here are very fine Houses, pleafant Gardens, two English Churches, and a French one: The Country is very agreeable. We faw the Chamber the Synod was held in the Year 1611, and we took a Collation in a high Tutret belonging to it, over-looking the Town and Country; our Seats moved about the Table continually, fo that we had a Diverfity of very delightful Prospects.

From thence we went to Delph by the Powder-Houfe, which is very handlomely built at a Diftance from the Town, to prevent fuch an Accident as happen'd heretofore, when the former Houle taking Fire, blew up Part of the Town. The Townhouse is in a Front of the Market-Place, and the new Church in another: In the old is to be feen, curioufly carv'd on the Side of the Wall, the Tomb of Van Tromp, the great Dutch Admiral, represented lying on a Canon encompassed with Arms and Trophics. In the Middle of the new there is a noble Monument of William Naffau, Prince of Orange, with his Son and Wife : His Statue is in Armour, with his Dog at his Feet, and Four Obelisks supported by Ten Marble Pillars. We faw the Place through which the Prince was murder'd by a Bullet in a House of this Town, Anno 1584.

Hague is the Place where the States General keep their Refidence, about an Hour's Journey diftant from Delph, in which Pallage we had a Sight of Two of the Prince of Orange's Houfes. All the Houfes of this Town are generally well built. The Prince's Court is a fine Piece of old Building, heautified with the Wood, Park, and Mail, helonging thereto. The Way to Scheveling is very remarkable, being cut through Sandy Hills, 2 and and pav'd with Brick for Three Miles; on each Side are four Rows of Trees. Defeending down to the Downs, towards the Sea on the Left-hand, there is a fine large Park belonging to the Earl of Portland with a fine but low Houfe in it. There are very pleafant and large Walks, with an Aviary full of Birds. The Hollanders brag that they have the largeft Village in Europe, by reafon the Hague is not wall'd.

Three Dutch Miles from the Hague is Leyden, one of the neatest Towns in Europe, well built, having large clean Streets, beaucified with fine Rows of Trees, with a handfome Canal in the Middle, well fortified after the modern Way. Hengist Caftle is very curious for its Antiquity, on the Top of which is a Labyrinth, and a Well, out of which they took a live Fish when the Town was almost famish'd during a Siege, which they shew'd to the Enemy to make their Condition believ'd better than it was, and by that Means to diffearten the Befiegers. There are very handfome Stairs from the Top to the Bottom, and a good Houfe by it, where they have their publick Sales and Entertainments. In the Anatomy School there are a great many Curiofities. In the French Church is the Tomb of Joseph Scaliger, with a large Infeription upon it, and thefe few Words, which he himfelf defir'd to be placed thereon : Son I Rough St. 40 1

Fosephus

Distant, D

Josephus Justus Scaliger Jul. Cæsar. Fil. Hic expecto Resurrectionem.

As also that of Carolus Clusius the grand Herbalift :

Omnia naturæ qui munera pectore clausit, Clusius Herbifero Clauditur boc tumulo.

And thefe following :

Non potuit plures bic quærere Clusius berbas, Ergo novas campis quærit in Elysis.

I faw at one of the Burgomafter's Houfe feveral curious Things worth feeing.

Amsterdam is a City for Trade, Shipping, Riches, fair Streets, and pleafant Habitations, fcarce yielding to any in the World, lately encompass'd with a new Wall, and fortified after the modern Way. The new Streets are very large and uniform. The whole Town being in a low Marshy Ground, the Water is let in through all the confiderable Streets. 'Tis built upon Pillars of tall Fir-Trees ramm'd down perpendicularly close by one another. For the Foundation of a Steeple, over-against the Church of St. Kathe Earth. The Stadthoufe is the nobleft Building in all these Countries: It cost above 8000000 Guelders. All the Churches ches are very Beautiful; that of St. Catharin is remarkable for the Wooden Pulpit which coft 60000 Livers. and the Banifters of Brafs. The Rafp-Houfe, Spin-Houfe, Dollbus for Melancholick Perfons of both Sexes, the Hofpital for the Sick, another for Children, all have great Revenues for their Support; fo that there is not a Beggar to be feen in the Streets. Upon all Appointments at Ithe Tavera, or elfewhere, and upon many other Occasions, whofoever fails at the Time appointed, forfeits more or tels to the Poor.

The Jews live here fplendidly. It happen'd that I was there at the Feaft of their New Year, and heard their Blowing of Horns, Shouting, and Singing. I law there a Franciscan Thirty Years old, and another who had been a Professor at Toloufe, and before that a Phylician to the King of Spain, both professing publickly the Jewish keligion. I was also prefent at the Circumcilion of a Child, which is perform d by thrufting a Probe in between the Glans, and with a Broad Incision Knife they cut off the Foreskin close to the Inftrument; what remains of the Skin is iromediate ly put back, the Blood ftopp'd with Powders and a Plaiffer applied, the Relations and Friends finging all the while, that the Cries may be the lefs heard.

Though I had feen all Europe, and taken Notice chiefly of many noble Cities, yet I was much furpriz'd at the first Sight of the United

United Provinces, especially of Holland, and the Parts adjoining; whofoever has obferv'd the easie Accommodation for travelling there, both by Land and Water, their excellent Order, and regular Courfe in all Things, the Abundance of Varieties in all Kinds, the Industry, Frugality and Wealth of the People, their numerous good Towns, their extraordinary Neatness in their Buildings and Houfes, their proper Laws and Administration of Justice, their incredible Number of Shipping and Boats, will chink it an Omiffion to reft in the Sight of other Countries without taking a View of this; a Country of fo little Extent, and foon travell'd over, but so replenished with People, good Cities, Towns and Villages not to be met with upon fo fmall a Compass of Ground in the whole World.

This Country being very low, the Soil is generally wet, the Air thick and moift by Reafon of the frequent Fogs arifing from the many Lakes and Canals.

The first Book printed in Europe, viz. a Copy of Tully's Offices (carefully preferv'd at Haerlem) was printed at Leyden, where that ufeful Art was at first invented or improv'd. The curious Fountains and Cafcades at Loo, the Brazen Font in St. Peter's Church in Zutphen, very remarkable for its admirable Workmanship; the two Brazen Diffues in the Village of Lofdon, in which were baptized, Anno 1276. by William Suffragan Bishop of Treves, 365 Children, whereof 182 were E Males.

Males, as many Females, and the odd one a Hermaphrodite, all born at a Birth by the Countels of Henberg, Daughter of Florent, Fourth Earl of Holland; one of these Children is to be seen in the Museum Regium at Copenbagen.

There is a remarkable Stone-Quarry near Maestricht, which looks like a fubterrancous Palace fupported by fomethousands of square Pillars 15 Foot high, between which are spacious Walks.

The Seven Provinces are like fo many Commonwealths, each Province being a diftinct State, and every City having an independant Power within it felf to judge all Caufes, whether Civil or Criminal, and to inflict even Capiral Punifhments; but all join'd together make up one Republick, the most confiderable in the World, which is govern'd by the Affembly of the States-General, confifting of Seven Voices, each Province having one.

To this Affembly held commonly at the Hague, belongs the Power of making War or Peace, receiving and difpatching of Ambaffadors; and Matters are not determin'd here by the Plurality of Voices, but all the Provinees muft be of an unanimous Confent, and each Reprefentative returning to his refpective Province, muft propole the Matter in a Provincial Affembly confifting of Deputies of all the Cities of that Province, whomust alfo return, and receive the Confent of their Principals, otherwise nothing can be concluded.

In this Affembly of the States General, the Seven Provinces give their Voices in the following Order, viz. Gueldres and Zusphen first, because Gueldres is the eldest, and the Plenipotentiaries thereof were the first that propos'd the Union ; then Holland ; thirdly Zealand, Fourthly Utreebt, Fifthly Friefland, Sixthly Over-Isel, and laftly Groningen. In this Affembly affifts the Council of State compos'd of twelve Men, whereof Guelderland fends 2, Holland 3, Zealand 2, Utrecht 2, Friesland onc, Over-Isel onc, and Groningen one; whole Bulinels is to flate the Expence for the fucceeding Year, and propofe Ways to levy it, and to deliberate Matters brought before the States-General. Their Motto is,

Concordià res parvæ crescunt.

There is but one Archbishop, viz. of Utrecht, titular Bishops 5, and as many Suffragans, viz. of Deventer, Groningen, Haerlem, Lewarden, and Middleburg. All Sects are tolerated for Trading-fake; the publick Profession is the reformed Calvinism. We fet Out from hence for Denmark in a Merchant-Ship and paid for our Paffage Six Dollars apiece.

Copenbagen is the Capital of Denmark, in the Ine of Zealand, a very large City, the Arfenal well provided with Artillery, the Citadel regularly built on the Sea-fhore with feveral Baftions, and Ravelins before the Curtains, which reach from the Citadel to the South Part, and continue beyond the Arm of the Sea, which separates Zealand E 2 from from Armack, a Circuit of Fortifications confifting of eight Baftions Royal and a Ravelin, which enclose the new City and the Port with the Fleet, and face the Talbooth, or Cuftom-houfe Battery that fecures the Entry of the Haven; which Fortifications make the City of a round Form, the Harbour excellent and capacious, being able to entertain 500 Sail, where neither Wind nor Enemics can annoy them. The Streets of the Town are lighted by Lanthorns; Flambeaus are not us'd for fear of Fire, because of fo many Buildings of Timber : To prevent any Misfortune by Fire, every Houlekeeper must have a large Tub full of Water at his Door, or elfewhere in the Houfe. This City is join'd by a Bridge to the Isle Armack, in which is built a new Town of Five or Six hundred Houfes, and a large Exchange, with a great Vault to keep Merchandize in.

This Kingdom is hereditary, and Lutheranifin is the predominant Religion: The Air cold and wholfome; the common People as much addicted to Drunkennefs as in Germany, but more proud and cunning than their Neighbours. There is one Archbishop, wiz, of Copenhagen, five Bishops, and two Univerfities. Christianity was first planted in this Country by the Means of Pope Adrian the Fourth, an Englishman, who before his Affumption of the Popedom, was call'd Nicholas Breakspear.

The

The Kingdom of Norway belongs to the King of Denmark, the Inhabitants whereof are very fimple and ignorant; towards the Northern Parts of it the People live under Tents, having no Towns; the Air is fo extreme cold there, that it is but thinly inhahited, and by the meaneft of People, the Soil being alfo very barren.

Stockholm is the Capital of Sweden, it coft us three Dollars apiece to go thither by Sea for our Paffage and Expences. The City is built upon Six Iflands, join'd together by Bridges, and has two large Suburbs. The Port is one of the fafelt in Europe, for about 400 Ships of the greateft Burthen may ride fafely in it without Anchor, the Mountains round it defending them from Storms; as the Citadel and two Forts guard the Canal from the Infults of the Enemy; but it has this Inconveniency, that it is very far from the Sea, and the Lake Meler that falls from it into the Baltick, is full of Windings, and has no Tide, which makes the greater Difficulty for Ships to get out.

This City has almost all the Trade of Sweden, and is one of the fairest of all the North; it is very populous, the Castle is large, cover'd with Copper, and ferves for an Arfenal; the Officers of the Court lodge in it, and most of the Offices for publick Affairs are kept there, it has more Strength than Beauty: There are nine large Churches cover'd with Copper. St. Nicholas is tho most remarkable. In the King's Chapel at E_2 the the Altar there is a Silver Statue of our Saviour on the Crofs at full length. The Citadel is commanded by a neighbouring Hill, and the King's Palace, which is ftrong, lies within it. Almost all the Streets are very large, which makes the Town extraordinary pleafant.

From hence to Revel or Rival are 60 Miles by Water, a handfom well fortified Town, feated on a fmall Gulph, a confiderable Mart, fold to the Tentonick Order in 1561. fubmitted to the Protection of Sweden afterwards, ftipulating feveral Immunities.

Upfal is the most ancient City of the Kingdom, and formerly the Refidence of the Kings; before the Reformation they were all crown'd and buried here, and in the Year 1654. Queen Christina refign'd there the Crown : It has a Caftle (built after the Gothick Manner) on a Hill, and commands the whole City; there allo was the chief Seat of Paganifin, where there was a very rich Temple of which Johannes Magnus tells fo many curious Hiftories. It is an Archbishop's See, who keeps always his Court there : The Cathedral has a Clock of admirable Structure; most Part of the Books in the Library were given by Gustavus Adolphus who brought them out of Germany.

Riga is the Metropolis of Livonia, the Seat of an Archbishop, and a great Emporium, 25 Miles North-East of Mittau in Curland; it is a large City well fortified with strong Walls a very large Trench on the Land-side, with a strong a ftrong Caftle on the River, wherein refides the Governour of Livonia. The Haven is guarded by a Fort call'd Dunamunder Schans, two Leagues below the City, it commands the Harbour fo that no Ships can go in or out without Leave. The City is well built, has great Traffick for Corn, Hemp, Flax, Pitch, Tar, Planks, Skins and Fursof all Sort, which Commodities are brought hither on Sledges over the Iee and Snow in the Winter, and are ftor'd up for the Englifh, Dutch and Germans, who come to exchange other Merchandize for them.

From hence to Nerva are 28 Miles, a Place of great Importance on a River of the fame Name, famous for the Victory that the prefent King Charles the Twelfth obtain'd over the Molecovites near it, in the Year 1700. and has a confiderable Trade.

Elbing, in Royal Pruffia, is 45 Miles from Koningsberg, a very pleafant and populous Place, enrich'd by a good Port and Trade; it is divided into Old and New, it was for fome Time Imperial, then under the Teutonick Order; afterwards, following the Example of Dantzick and Thorn, it flook off that Yoke. In 1701 the King of Swedentook it, and forc'd it to pay heavy Contributions. It is one of the Repositories of the Archives of Royal Pruffia.

Thorn on the Vistula, is the fairest and best built Town of Royal Prussia, adorn'd with an Academy, and a Town-house inferior to none, except that of Amsterdam. The Fa-E 4. mous mous Aftrologer Coperniens was born here: It is under the Protection of the Swedes fince 1703.

Colmar is one of the most confiderable Places in Sweden; the Fortifications are regular, and the Citadel of great Extent: It has an excellent Port on a Creek of the Baltick, and is famous for the Union of the three Northern Crowns that was concluded here.

Lunden was formerly a confiderable City, and had 22 Churches, but now it retains little of its ancient Splendor. The Cathedral of St. Laurence is a flately Building, the Famons Clock there fhews the Year, Month, Day, all Feftivals fix'd and moveable, the Hour, and Minute of each Hour, two Horfemen come out and flrike in a fighting Poflure, then a Door opens which diffeovers the Virgin Mary on a Throne with our Saviour in her Arms, and the Magi worfhipping him, two Trumpets founding all the while; there is alfo a magnificent Altar in this Church: The Town has no Walls, and but few Inhabitants.

The Power of the King was anciently rnuch limited, he could do nothing that concern'd the Government of the Kingdom without the Confent of the States; for the Swedes were jealous of their Liberties, and in former Times they had a Magistrate call'd Dertzet, defign'd as a Curb to their Sovereign, who had a Power by their Conftitution to reprove the King when he acted contrary trary to the Laws of the Land, and to put him in Mind of his Duty: But now the King is abfolute, and the States have nothing left of their ancient Power. The End of their Meeting is only to ratifie the King's Propofals. The Nobility and Gentry are reprefented by one of each Family, of which there are about 1000. The Colonels, Lieutenant-Colonels, Majors and Captains out of each Regiment, are Members of this Diet: The Body of the Clergy fends about 200 to reprefent them, 150 are fent from the Burroughs, and 250 from the Peafants.

The Air of this Country is generally very cold, but wholfom, the Soil not very fruitful.

There are two Archbishopricks, viz. Upfal and Riga, eight Bishopricks, and two Universities. They are all Lutherans, except in Livonia, where there are many Papists, and some Idolaters, as also in Lapland, where many worship the Sun, Fire, Scrpents, &c. The Uniformity of Religion is imputed to the Method, Romanorum Presbyterorum castrationis.

The Swedish Laplanders are remarkable for Diabolical Arts; they excuse themselves, alledging, that it is necessary to use Inchantments to prevent their being hurt by others. Parents and Masters teach the Children these Devilish Arts, and bequeath to them as an Inheritance, such Spirits as they suppose they have found ferviceable to themfelves. Each Family has its own Daemons, and and fome of them forefee Things to come, though against their Will; fometimes Damons appear to them in the Woods, and teach them certain Songs that they muft never forget; and they always appear to them for their Service when they fing it.

Warfaw 147 Miles North North-East from Cracow, on the Weft Bank of the Vifula, a large and populous City encompafs'd with a double Wall, and a very deep Trench, divided into Four Parts, viz. the Old, the New, and the two Suburbs, call'd Cracow and Prague, feated in the very Center of the Polish Dominions, the Royal Residence, the Place where the Grand Diet is affembled; in the adjacent Plains the King's Election is made, where the Nobility have their Tents, and are encamp'd during that Time. It has a noble Palace, stately Churches, and the publick Buildings magnificent ; the Bridge, although built of Wood, is very Noble; be-yond which is another Palace of the King, very ftrong, and feated in the middle of a Morals.

Pofna on the River Worta, flands about 50 Miles North from Cracow, famous for its Trade and Univerfity; the Jefuits College here is very fine. The Inhabitants are for the most Part Papists ; here likewife are many Jews, who have greater Privileges than the Citizens themfelves. The City is ftrong and has a good Caffle with a double Wall and a deep Ditch. The Suburbs are encom pals'd with a Morals and a deep Lake, they 310 are frequently laid under Water by the overflowing of the Worta.

Cracow flands on a rocky Bank of the Viftula; it is the largeft, and beft built City of Poland, the Houles of Free-Stone four or five Stories high, cover'd with Boards. The Town is divided into Four Parts, join'd by Wooden-Bridges, it is very populous; the King's Palace is on the Top of a high Hill, which overlooks both the City and Country. There are 11 Colleges, and 14 Grammar-Schools: The Streets are not well pav'd, but broad and ftraight; the Market-place is one of the greatest in Europe ; the Churches stately, but the Cathedral is in the Castle, not a great nor good Structure, but remarkable for the Sepulchres of the Kings and their Coronation, and confiderable for its Chapter and Treasury. Among the reft those of the Jesuits and Dominicans are the fineft: Here are a great Many Italian and German Merchants.

Guesna is the principal City of Great Poland, formerly the Metropolis of the whole Kingdom; it was the See of an Archbishop, who is Primate of all Poland, and Regent when there is an Interregnum: The Cathedral has Gates of Corintbian Brass, and a rich Treasury.

The Poles are govern'd by a King elected by the Nobility and Clergy only, the Commons having no Voice in it; their Maxim is to chule a King of fome Foreign Princely Family, to preferve the better an Equality among the Nobles, and prevent domeflick Broils; they avoid industriously the House of Austria, left they should be ferv'd by it as the Hungarians and Bohemians were. The Government is rather Aristocratick than Monarchical, for the King can neither make War, Peace, or act any Thing of Importance, without the Confent of the States-General. There are frequent Interregnums occasion'd either by Death, Deposition or Resignation, during which Time, as also in the King's Absence, the Archbishop of Guesna, the Bishop of Placeko, or that of Posna officiates.

This Country is very populous, the Air as well as the Soil, is very different, the Northern Parts being very cold, and lefs fruitful than the Southern, which abounds in Corn and Fruit fufficient, even for their Neighbours. The Country is full of Towns and Villages: The King and Nobles have in their Poffeffion 9000 Cities and Villages, the Bifhops and Canons 10550, the reft of the Clergy, Monks and Nuns 6950.

He that fets up for Candidate must have the following Qualifications; he is not to be a Native, nor prefent at the Election, but must be rich, and no abfolute or neighbouring Prince; he must be actually a Roman Catholick, or promife to become one before his Coronation: After he is elected he must fwear before the Altar in the Church of St. Jobn at Warfaw, to keep the Patta conventa; the Form of the Contract is, if. That he shall not appoint any Successfor, but preferve ferve all the Laws made for the Freedom of Election. 2 dly. That he shall pretend to no Right of Coining of Money, but leave that and the Profits arifing from it, in the Hands of the Republick. 3 dly. That he will not declare War against any Prince, or bring Foreign Troops without the Confent of the Diet. 4tbly. That all Field-Officers shall be either Poles, Lithuanians, or Natives of the Provinces, depending on the Crown of Poland. stbly. That all the Officers of the Guards shall be either Poles or Lithuanians, and their Colonel a Polifh Nobleman, who must all fwear to be fubject to the grand Marshal. 6thly, Not to use his Privy-Seal in Affairs that concern the Republick. 7thly, That after a Place has been vacant fix Weeks at furthest, he shall bestow it on some wellqualified Polifb Gentleman. 8tbly, That he shall not marry without the Confent of the Senate and Gentry, who shall affign him what Retinue they pleafe. 9thly, That he shall not diminish his Treasure in the Castle of Cracow, but rather encrease it. 10thly, He shall borrow no Money without the Confent of the Dict. 11tbly, That he shall build no Fleet without the Advice of his Senate and Gentry, 12tbly, That he shall always administer Justice by the Advice of his Senators. 13thly, That he shall be content with those Revenues his Predecessors had. 14thly, That no Strangers be introduc'd into his Council, and that he shall bestow no Office or Dignity upon them. And, laftly, That

That he shall maintain and defend all Rights, Liberties, Immunities, and Privileges granted by former Kings to the Poles, Lithuanians, or to any of the Provinces depending on those two Nations. To these Articles they add others according to the Circumstance of Time, or the Quality of the Person elected.

The predominant Religion is that of Rome, all others being tolerated : There are many of the Greek Church and Armenians in Russia, Lutherans and Calvinists in Prussia; Socinians, Jews and Quakers in Lithuania.

Moskow, on a River of the fame Name, is Capital of Moscowy, 16 Miles in Compals, but not peopled in Proportion; within the Walls there are many Gardens and Meadows, the Streets not pav'd, except in fome Places with Fir-trees; the Houfes ill-contriv'd, built of Fir, and dove-tail'd one into another, the Chinks between are ftop'd up with Mofs, and the Roof cover'd with Bark. The Lutherans and Calvinifts are allow'd the Exercife of their Religion. The Czar's Palace takes up one half of the City; 'tis fortified with three Walls, a good Ditch, and well provided with Canon : All the Steeples within the Caftle are cover'd with gilt Copper, one of which is very remarkable for its great height, and another for its Bell, which weighs 33600 Pounds, counted bigger than the great Bell of Peking in China, or that of Rouen in Normandy, call'd George D'Amboife, and probably the greatest in the whole World;

World; its Height is 19 Foot, the Diameter within is 18, the external Circumference 64, the Thicknefs 2; it is never toll'd but upon extraordinary Occasions, 24 Men are employ'd in pulling the Rope below, and feveral others above. From hence to Smolensko are 37 Miles.

The Czar is arbitrary in all Parts of his Government, and alfo abfolute Lord of the Lives and Effates of his Subjects, who have lo great a Veneration for him, that they look upon his Will as that of Heaven; they call him God Almighty's Chamberlain ; fo that it is a Proverb among them, God only knows it and the Great Duke. The Czar always washes his Hands after he has given Audience to the Ambaffadors of Popish Princes, because he looks upon them as Pagans, and thinks the Touch of them defiles him. The Mofcovites from their Cradle are fo addicted to Lying, that it is not fafe to truft any of them; not only the meaner Sort are fubject to this Vice, but even their Ministers of State ; they maintain one Lye with a Thoufand more ; and if they are convicted, they don't blush, but rather smile, as if they had done fome worthy Action. The People drink in publick Houfes until their Money is spent, and frequently they fell all their Cloaths to pay their Reckoning: The Priefts out-do the People in Drunkennefs. Their ufual manner of Begging, is for the fake of God and the Great Duke.

They have more Monasteries for divore'd Wives, than for Maidens; the Carriage of both is very scandalous, for after Morning Prayers they walk abroad, and upon the least Temptation they comply with any lewd Propofal to gratific their vicious Inclinations,

The Czar's Sifters and Daughters are most commonly flut up in Monasteries, or in the Palace, where they are forc'd to continue Virgins, because the Czar will not marry them to any Prince that is not of their Faith, for all fuch they count Pagans, as the Children begot in fuch Wedlock Baftards ; neither are they allowed to marry Subjects, their Children begot in fuch Wedlock being accounted the Czar's Slaves. The Molcovite Women are not asham'd to be feen naked by Men, when in the Bath, and very often go naked with them into the fame Bath.

The Czar fuffers not his Wife, Sons, or Daughters, to cat with him, nor are they to be feen, if the Grand Dutchefs be indilpos'd; when a Phyfician comes into the Room, all the Windows are thut that he may not fee her; and if he wants to feel her Pulfe, fhe holds our her Arm cover'd with a Veil of fine Silk, that he may not touch her Skin. None of their Boors, and but few of their Citizens can repeat the Lord's Prayer.

From Smolensko to Vilna, the Metropolis of Lithuania, are 28 Miles; it is a large and popupopulous City, Capital of a Palatinate; about two Miles from it, by the Water-fide, is to be feen a fine Palace. From hence to Coningsberg are counted 24 Miles.

Here hence to Dantzick are 16 Miles; it is feated on a Bay of the Baltick Sea, a large well built; rich, and populous City, one of the greateft Granarics in Europe, and the famouleft Emporium on the Baltick; 'tis divided into three Parts, and although govern'd by three diffinct Senates, yet they make but one City under its own Government, and the Protection of Poland. The publick Buildings are magnificent, the Streets large, and the City water'd with two Rivulets, upon which are many Mills. From hence to Stetin are 15 Miles, thence to Guftrow 14, and from that to Lubec 11 Miles.

We arriv'd at Hamburg in a Post-Chariot, the Price is fix'd: It is one of the faireft and greatest Cities in Germany, naturally ftrong, a great Part lying on an Island, fortified, after the way of Holland, with Works of Earth, fac'd no where either with Brick or Stone: The City is noted for its fine Churches, and noble Steeples cover'd with Copper; it is commonly full of Strangers and Merchants of feveral Countries. The English live here in great Reputation. About the Change of the Moon, or in tempeftuous Weather, the Spring-Tides flow up the fmall Chanels, and fometimes ruin many Houles and Families. The Houses are most of Brick, exceeding high and ftately : There are four F Burgo-Burgomatters, twenty Aldermen, and twelve Council-men; hut in extraordinary Cafes they add fixty more.

- We went to Bremen partly by Water, having on both fides, for about eight Miles, very pleafant Woods, fome fine Houfes, and a-greeable Walks; the reft of the way is by Land in a Poft-Chariot. The Place is very ftrongly fortified by Nature and Art, for they can drown the neighbouring Plain when they pleafe : There are about it many fine Gardens and Pleafure-houfes; it is divided into Old and New, join'd by wooden Bridges, on the largeft of which there is an Engine that raifes Water, and distributes it, all over the City : They have four Burgomafters, twenty four Council-men, there being a Burgomafter and fix Council-men for each Quarter of the City. The Arfenal is very fmall, but mighty full, and well provided with great and finall Arms; there is a Canon of extraordinary Length; you may fee there also a Laplander brought thither alive in his own little Boat by the Tide.

The great Number of populous, large, and rich Cities in Germany affords great Pleafure to a Traveller; for befides 66 Free-Inperial Cities, there are more of good Note belonging to particular Princes, and divers enjoying high Privileges.

From Bremen we went all the way in a Post-Chariot to Delmenborst, Staple, Determinand Leer, the Price is fixed, and the Chariots must be ready at an Hour's-warning; from Int

Lier you take a little Boat for two Livers to Menuren, from thence a Chariot to Neyfchans, there your Trunks are fearch'd, and youbegin to pay in Holland Coin. From thence you go always in Barks drawn by Horfes to Winifluten, Groningen, Strobes, where your Trunks are likewife fearch'd. From thence to Doreum, Lennard, Bolfsward, Warcum, where your Trunks are again fearch'd. A Boat goes out every Morning from hence to Amferdam, but you may, if you pleafe, go by Land in a Chariot to Staderen, the Price being fix'd, there in a Fisher-Boat you cross to Enchuse, from whence you go in a Cha-riot to Horn; or elfe you may go in a Boat to Buffort, from whence fets out every Hour a Yatcht for Amsterdam.

The best way to go to Hannover is by the Coach of Ofnaburg, and to pay for the Places here to prevent Lofs of Moncy.

You go by Haerlem, a neat City, having a curious Grove near it; here is the greatest Church of all Holland, it has a very high Lanthorn upon it; within are many fine Monume upon it; Monuments and Inferiptions; in the Prince's House are all the Earls of Holland painted upon the Wall; in the Rooms there are very many curious and good Pieces of Painting, as Herod killing the innocent Children, his Feaft of the Gods, in which Vulcan's Foot is effective at a great Rate; and another of a Fryer and a Nun at a Collation, inferior to none : Here I first faw Malefactors punish'd by whipping with Rods; they lead them to a Poft upon a Scaffold, their Hands are tied, and they are drawn up by a Pulley very high, and then an Iron faften'd about their Wafte to keep them fleady, in which Pofture being flretch'd out they receive Fifty or Sixty Stripes, or more, according to the Merit of their Offence. The Sea of Haerlem is about Twenty Miles in Length; in a hard Winter it is all over frozen.

Utrecht is a large handfome City, fo well feated, and encompafs'd with fo populous a Country, that in a Day's Journey a Man may go from thence to any one of Fifty wall'd Towns and Cities, and to Thirty fix of them go and come back in a Day without Trouble. The English Church has a Pillar in the Middle, whofe Foundation could not be laid but upon Bulls Hides, and has the Picture of a Bull upon it with this Infeription:

Accipe, Posteritas, quod per tua sæcula narres, Taurinis cutibus Fundo solidata columna est.

The Mail is fine, and adorn'd with Five Rows of Trees on each Side.

Hanover is the Metropolis of the Dutchy that bears its Name. The River Lin divides it into Two Parts. The City is handfome, the Streets regular, broad, kept very clean, and well furnish'd with Lanthorns every where. Its Fortifications are in very good Order, with Ravelins before the Gates, well mounted with Braß Canons. The Court refides here. The Elector's Palace is a large old Building of Free Stone, with feveral Square Courts and fine Stair Cafes; the Furniture very rich, and his Court one of the most fplendid in the Empire. His Troop of Horfe-Guards consists of One hundred and fifty Men; the Horfes are all white, and the Equipage very handsome. He has Two Regiments of Foot-Guards, of One Battalion each. He entertains 12000 Foot, and 8000 Horfe.

The most remarkable Churches are that of St. James, (in which are Two Crucifixes, with the Pictures of the Apostles and many Saints) and that of the Holy-Cross, built with Free-Stone, much neater, with a double Row of Galleries round from the Altar. There is to be feen the History of the Gospel, a curious Piece divided into Fifty three Parts, painted by the best Masters. Near the Court, not far from the Elector's Chapel, are kept abundance of Relicks in a little Cabbin, among which there is one of St. John's Fingers, for which great Sums of Money has been offer'd feveral Times.

Four Fairs are here annually kept, to which a great many Foreigners do refort, and many more in the Carnaval Time; for there are few neighbouring Princes but take the Diversion of the Carnaval fooner at this Court than at Venice. If I may give my Opinion, I think it much better for feveral Reafons.

The

The Elector's Silver Mines bring him vaft Sums of Money, fo that he is reckon'd the richeft Prince in Europe. We went hence in our Calefh with Post-Horfes to Pens, Four Miles, to Brunfwick Three, to Wolfenbunk One Mile and a half.

Berlin is one of the fineft Cities in Germany. The Fortifications are regular, and capable of fuffaining a long Siege, feated in a fruitful Country with Vineyards on one Side, Marshes on the other, and Woods full of Game on the third. The King's Palace is very flately, the Largeness and Grandeur of the Court, the regular Architecture, and the Broadness of the Streets, make this City very magnificent. The most remarkable Things in and about the Palace are the Afmoury, Chambers of Rarities, Galleries with a Multitude of rare Pictures, the Gardens, and Water-Works. In the Palace there are Ten great Appartments for the Royal Family, with a great Number of Chambers for the Courtiers, all magnificently furnishid. In the King's Appartment there is an extraordinary rich Furniture of Maffy Plate, Pi Aures, and other great Curiofities, chiefly a large Cahinet full of ancient rare and var luable Medals, with abundance of other curious Pieces. In the Queen's are a vaft Num ber of Pictures of the best Masters, particu larly that of the holy Supper, and the Unnailing of our Saviour from the Crois the Wife Men that came to worfhip, and a Picture of all the Royal Family of England The

The King's Library equalizes any in Europe. The Arfenal is counted one of the best furnish'd of all the North. The great Stables have Room for Four hundred Horfes. The King has above Three thousand of his own. In fhore, his Court is one of the most magmificent in Europe, and very Civil to Strangers, as I can reftify by Experience. The King has Two thouland five hundred Gentlemen in his Court fit to command, and his Houshold confists of Eight thousand.

Magdeburg is now under the King of Pruffia. It is of a very great Circuit; but little more than half rebuilt fince the plundering of it by Tilly, 36006 Perfons being deftroy'd therein. The Cathedral was built after the English Fashion by the Emperor Otho, and his Empreis Editha, an English Woman, Daughter, to King Edmund, whole Effigy I faw in the Church: She had in Marriage Nineteen Tuns of Gold. The Lutheran Churches are handfome, and their Pulpits richly fet off. I faw in the Cathedral the Statues of the Five wife Virgins, and of the Five foolifh ones lamenting, all very well express'd: We faw alfo the Bason in which Pilate wash'd his Hands, and the Ladder whereon the Cock flood after St. Feter's Denial. I was affur'd afterwards that the Cock flood upon a Pillar. Lutber's Chamber is yet to be feen among the Ruins of the Cloifter; upon the Door are these Verses: weither second a second whe

The first Tournament that ever was in Germany was perform'd in this Ciry in the Year 635, open'd by the Emperor Henricks Auceps, or Henry the Fowler.

Wirtemberg is a fair large City, with a great Streer in the Middle. There is a ftrong Caftle, and a famous University, much flourishing, and having large Privileges. The Town is well peopled, and fortified by Marshes on the North, and a Canal to the Elb, a deep Ditch, good Ramparts, and Five large Bastions on the Side where it is most exposid. Some give this waggish Account of the Town:

Leucorin intranti tibi quæ sint obvia quæris? Sus, miles, meretrix aut studiosus erit.

Leypfick is a large rich City, of great Trade. It has Three Marts in the Year, and a great Refort unto it from many Parts. It is well built ; the Houfes are generally Seven Stories high, the Caftle ftrictly guarded, and has in it a ftrong white Tower, but the Works about the Town are not confiderable. St. Nicholas's Church is the faireft within of any Lutheran Church in Germany : They have a remarkable Burying-Place for the

the better Sort, (like ll Campo Santo at Pifa, fo call'd, becaufe the Earth that the Emperor Frederick brought for Ballaft of his Ships from the Holy Land was laid upon that Ground.) There is an University alfo, first occasion'd by the German Scholars of P_{rague} , who, during the Troubles of the Huffites, came hither to the Number of Two thousand in One Day.

Here we began to pay Twelve Großhes for each Horfe. The Country is very plealant all the Way. We faw the King and Queen of Poland in a Redoubt, attended by a vaft Court: The Princes of Furstemberg, of Gotba, and of Wirtemberg, were there allo. The Princes James and Constantine, Sons of the late King of Poland, were then Prifoners in the Caftle: They had for their Guard an Hundred Soldiers belonging to Wolfenbuttle. The Opera House is reckon'd the largeft in Europe. During the Fair the Scholars performed the Part of Musicians.

We went from hence to Wurtzen, three Miles, the Way being very good, and ferticd over the River with Danger before we came to the Town of Ofchatz, which is Three Miles. From thence we proceeded Four Miles further to Meiffen; but for the Two laft Miles the Way is very bad. There is a Caftle upon a Hill clofe to the Town, very firong, wherein Six Perfons of Quality were then confin'd by King Augustus. From hence to,

Dresden are counted Three Miles, of very good Way. It is the Sear of the Elector of Samony, now King of Poland, very well fortified after the modern Fashion : The Baftions are cover'd with Brick, and in each there is a Cavalier : There is a large Trench about it, which in fome Places is double. The River Elb adds much to its Strength, upon which is built a very noble Stone-Bridge. The Walls are very ftrong ; and it is faid that under the first Stone that was laid in the Building thereof they plac'd a Silver gilded Cup, and Three Glaffes full of Wine, a Book of the Laws, and another of Coins. The Places most worthy to be feen are the Italian Garden in the Subarbs, the Hunters House in the old Town beyond the River, the Elector's Palace, his Houfe for wild Beafts, his Stables, and the Arfenal. The chief Church is very fair, wherein they preach every Morning at Seven a Clock. was there when Luther's Holiday was kept: The Lutheran Women mourn in White, 35 others do in Black, and the Woman of the House fays commonly Grace instead of the Husband.

From hence we went to Zeitze, Two Miles, the Way being very good, thence to Peter's-Wall, Three Miles of very bad Way, as well as the Two Miles to Haussick; thence to Laverzitz, Two Miles, to Baudonin Two, to Tourscho Two more, all pretty good Way: From this laft there are Two Miles to,

Prague,

Prague, on the great River Muldan, feated in a very fruitful Country, encompafs'd with flately Courts, and pleasant Palaees, as if it were in the Middle of an Amphitheatre. It is divided into the old, new, and the little City. Here is the only University in Bohemia: What is reported of the Number of Students in former Times is hardly to be credited. In the Year 1409, under the Re-Aorship of John Hus, there were reckon'd 40000. The Irifh and the Jefuits have fine large Monasteries. The leffer Town exceeds the other for Pleafantnefs, and for the Beauty of the Buildings, and fair Palaces: Their Communication is by a fine Stone Bridge of Sixteen Arches, being about 1700 Feet long, and 35 broad, There are Two Gates under Two high Stone Towers at each End : Upon it are Statues which caufe Breat Superfitition. A great Part of this Town lies very high. Upon the Hill flands Upper Prague, with a fine Summer-Houfe, and a magnificent Palace of the Emperou: By it is a large Cathedral full of old Monuments of great Perfons. The Palace and Garden of Colaredo are exceeding near, tho' small; but that of Count Walleftein pleased me much better: It was built upon the Ruins, of an Hundred Houfes that were pull'd down on Purpofe. The Stables are very large and curious. There is a Marble Pillar between each Horfe, a Rack of Steel, with a Manger of Marble, and over each Horfe his Picture as big as the Life. The Name

Name of a Bay Horfe that belong'd to the Count was Monte Doro, of a Marc Bella Donna, and of his beloved Horfe Mai Querido.

There is great Talk here still of John Hus and Jerome of Prague. See what Aneas Sylwins faid of them :

Johannes & tate major, authoritate, doctrina & facundia superior Hieronymus, pertulerunt ambo constanti animo necem, & quasi ad epulum invitati, ad incendium properarunt, nullam emittentes vocem quæ miseri animi posset ferre indicium: Ubi ardere cæperunt hymnum cecinere, quem vin slamma & fragor ignis intercipere potuit : Nemo Philosophorum tam forti animo mortem pertulisse traditur, quam ist incendium.

It is dangerous to walk at Night in this Town, unlefs you be in the Company of Five or Six front Friends. The Pofts beginning to be too dear, I hired Four Horfes for our Calefh to carry us to Vienna for Thirty Dollars, Twelve Grofhes.

From hence to Hawwalt are Three Miles. very good Way, and as many to Newfadt. Here we began to fleep upon Straw. Thence to Schaflow are counted Three Miles: It is a pretty little Town. Stadtoff is Four Miles further, the Way being indifferent good, but more bad than good to Staken, which is Three Miles from it. A Mile from this you meet with a very large Town: The Dutchy of Marn begins here. From hence to Piernith are Four Miles of very bad Way; thence to Podovitz, Three Miles

Miles of indifferent Way : Four Miles further is Sonam, the Way for the most Part very good. We had tolerable Beds here, but very dear. The Town is pretty large and fine, but not fortified. Here begins Auftria.

The Kingdom of Bohemia belongs at prefent to the House of Austria. The Soil is generally fat and arable, but in fome Places barren and Sandy. There are many Forefts and Woods, but not fo large as to make any confiderable Part of the Country unhabitable. Their Gardens and Orchards produce great Store of Fruit and Saffron. There are good Meadows, Hop-Grounds, rich Mines of Silver, Copper, Iron, Tin, Lead, Sulphur, Nitre, Carbuncles, Amethifts, Jafper, Saphirs, and other precious Stones. They make a great Quantity of Glass and Allum. Their white Beer is extraordinary good. The Air is very cold, but in some Places fo corrupt, that it often caufes contagious Distempers. The Inhabitants are well proportion'd, subtile, couragious, and true to their Word, but addicted to Gluttony; Drunkennefs, and for the most Part to Robbery.

From Sonam to Shown-Graven are Three Miles of very pleafant Way, beautified with fine Fields, feveral Villages, and Cloifters. From hence to Unter-Milhewen are counted. Three Miles more, a very good Road, with fine Houfes on each fide. Thence to Vienna are Four Miles of extraordinary good Way. One

One Mile from the City we went over Three feveral Branches of the Danube, upon Three exceflive long wooden Bridges. Then we came to the Suburh call'd Leopoldstadt, where out Trunks were fearch'd but not very exactly; we were ohlig'd to give fomething to the Commissioners Servants.

There is another Way to go from Prague to Vienna, viz. by Newbing, a Place belonging to the Elector Palatine. 'Tis adorn'd with a noble Palace. It was taken by the Duke of Bawaria in the Year 1703, but abandon'd in 1704 after the Action of Schellemberg. It flands Forty feven Miles Weft from Ratisbonne, and Twelve Weft of Ingelftalt.

Straubing, is a handfome wall'd Town, belonging to the Elector of Bawaria. The Streets are pretty large and ftrait. In the Market-Place there is a Tower painted all over with Green and Gold Colour. There is alfo a pretty wooden Bridge over the Danube.

Newftadt is one of the chiefeft Cities in Auftria, with a Piazza in the Middle, Two Sides whereof are arch'd, and fupported with Pillars. There are Four Gates, whereof Three are to be feen from the Piazza. St. Jacob's is the chiefeft Church, adorn'd with Two Steeples in the Front. The Emperor has here a Palace of a fquare Form, with Four Towers which are feen from a far, as is also moth Part of the Town, which is encompafe'd with a Ditch and Two Walls.

Lintz,

Lintz, the chief City of Higher Auftria is not very large, but as neat and handfome as any in Germany. There is a very large Market-Place, with very good Houfes about it. The whole Town is built with Free-Stone; the Caftle, of modern Building, ftands upon a Hill, and is very large. The Bridge over the Danube is pretty handfome.

Vienna, where the Emperor refides, flands . Forty Miles Weit from Presburg, and is one of the greatest, most populous, strong, and richeft Cities in Germany, inferior to none in the Beauty and Magnificence of its Buildings. The Emperor's Palace is enrich'd with an admirable Repository of Rarities, and a large and excellent Library. The Cathedral of St. Stephen, the Jesuits College and Church, are great Ornaments to the Town. Its Fortifications confift of a Wall, and Twelve Baftions, viz. Two facing the Danube, and Ten towards the Land, with very deep large Ditches, into which they can let in the Danube. The City is fairly built with Stone, and well pav'd. Many of the Houfes are Six Stories high, fomewhat flat Roofed, after the Italian Way. The Compais of the Ground will not admit the Streets to be very large. The Buildings are remarkable both below and above, and their Cellars very deep. It is faid of this City, that Palatia digna regibus, & Templa que possis Mirari Italia.

And

And Aneas Sylvins faid Two hundred fifty fix Years ago,

Cuperent reges Scotorum tam egregie quam me diocres Viennenses ac Norimbergenses habitare.

At the Entrance over the Gate of the Emperor's Palace are fet in Capital Letters, A, E, I, O, U, whereof various Interpretations are made; and out of a Curiofity of knowing them, that which was told me is this, Auftria Eft Imperium Orbi Universo, Alles Erdrich Ist Offerich Unterthan.

The Spire of Vienna is counted the largest, that of Landfhut in Bavaria the higheft, and that of Strasburg the neatest. The Danube receives above Sixty confiderable Rivers, and in a modeft Computation runs a Courfe of about Fifteen hundred Miles. He that has feen the Bodleian Library at Oxford, and the Vatican at Rome, would be much furpriz'd to find fuch a noted one here. The Number and Noblenefs of the Books doth much exceed the Receptacle they are contain'd in as making no fair fhew at the Entrance, and being fomewhat dark: But as for the Value and Number of the Books it excels any other Library in Europe : There are couted 90500 Volumes. The Rarities of the Great Duke of Tuscany, the Treasure of the Loretto, of St. Mark in Venice, the Elector of Saxony's at Dresden, were very satisfactory to me; yet having an Oportunity, I would not leave Vienna

Vienna without feeing the most noble Treafury of his Imperial Majesty, having heard to much of it, and knowing it to be the Collection of many Emperors: We had therefore the Honour of waiting on his Grace the Duke of Marlborough and the Earl of Sunderland, and were extreamly delighted with the admirable Curiofities thereof. To fer down all we faw would take up a large Volume; I will therefore only advise the Traveller to fee them. If he fhould happen to be there in Winter, during the hard Weather, when the Ground is cover'd with Snow and Froft, they have very pleafant Recrea-tions for Gentlemen and Ladies in running Courfes in handfome Sledges in the Shape of Griffins, Tigers, Swans, Shells, Dolphins, Peacocks, &t. carv'd, painted, and gilded. The Lady fits in one of these richly attir'd, commonly in Velvet lin'd with rich Furs, fet off with Lace and Jewels, and in a Velvet Caplin'd with Sables; the Sledge is drawn by a Horfe dress'd up with Feathers of all Colours, and Bells hanging about him, one or more Pages ride on Horfeback with Torches in their Hands in the Night-time : And after this Manner they perform their Courfe upon the Snow frozen about the Streets Night and Day, in almost all the chief Towns of Germany, with very good Speed one after another. A Gentleman stands behind the Lady, and guides the Horfe. But the Froast break-ing up puts a Stop to these Recreations. This Diversion is chiefly practis'd in the G City

City of Vienna and Hanover, to my Knowledge, having had a Share of it in both aces .

In Crimes of High Treafon, they cut off the Right-Hand of the Malefactor, and his Head immediately after. I faw one executed in the fame Manner: As foon as his Head fell to the Ground, the Body remaining in the Chair wherein he was plac'd at firft, a Man ran speedily with a Pot in his Hand, and filling it with the Blood yet fpouting out of his Neck, he prefently drank it off, and ran away. He did this as a Remedy against the falling Sicknefs. Some approve this Medicine, and feveral have done the like. I have read that formerly fome Epileptical Perfons drank the Blood of the Gladiators.

Before you depart from this City, be fure you provide your felf with a Pafs and a Certificate of Health from the Venetian Ambaffador, if you intend to go for Italy. And for your Carriages, if you have Conveniency of your own, it is best to agree with fome land Coach-Man or Carrier: You often meet with fome going to that Country's with whom you may bargain ; but take Care to have your Agreement in Writing, otherwife they are apt to deny their Promifes The common Price from Vienna to Venice, by the Way of Stiria and Carinthia, is Forry eight Guelders, or Twelve Ducats, each for all Charges, and for Buona Manchan (as they call it) that is, Gifts to Servants. Presburg Fresburg is Ten German Miles from Vienna; a very pleafant City, guarded with a ftrong Caftle on the Top of a Hill, and became the Seat of an Archbishop when Gran fell into the Hands of the Tarks, it being removed thither before the late Conquests of the Emperor Leopold; upon which Occasion it was made the Meeting Place of the States of Hungary. The Crown of Hungary, fo much effeenid by the Natives, is kept in one of the Four ftrong Towers of the Caffle. The Jefuits have usurp'd the Cathedral belonging to the Lutherans. They have here the fame ftrange Way of executing their Malefactors as in Scotland, and at Merz in Lorrain, with an Engine like a Maid. A Coach comes hither every Day from Vienna. The States of this Country confift of, 1. The Prelates: 2. The Barons: 3. The Gentlemen: 4. The Royal Towns. The Prelates, Archbishops, and Bishops, are secular Princes as in Germany, and do their Homage as Seculars. The Archbishop of Gran is their Head Chancellor, Primate of the Kingdom, and by his Place always Legate of the Papal See.

Tirnau is about Thirty Miles North-Eaft of Presburg, the only University left in Hungary. In the Year 1414, Twelve Jews and Jeweffes were burnt alive here for having fliffed a Christian Child, opening his Veins, drinking Part of his Blood while he expir'd, and referving the reft for other Ules. They confess'd it was their Custom to offer the Blood of a Christian to God once a Year, G 2 and

and that was the Turn of the Jews of that City.

Newbaufel is Thirty fix Miles North-Eaft of Presburg, a handfome Town, with a large Piazza at the upper End, where ftands a fine Tower. The Place is finall, but very ftrong having Six Baftions in the Form of a Star, with a large Ditch full of Water, and a Fort. There are Two Gates, each guarded with a Half-Moon. There is alfo a Caftle, and in it a Church, wherein are many Figures of carv'd Wood, and fome Relicks of Note; but being in the Poffeffion of the Lutberans they are not regarded, though carefully preferv'd, as they do in feveral Churches in Germany, viz. at Nuremberg, Magdeburg, Hanover, &c. left by the Papifts.

Great Waradin, upon the Confines of Tranfilvania, is ftrongly fortified with Five Baftions, and a Ditch water'd by the Kefter, a ftrong Caftle, and a Sort of a diffinet Citadel.

Stubn is noted for Seven Hot-Baths, very much frequented: The first is the Noblemens Bath, the fecond the Gentlemens, the third the Countrymens, the fourth the Countrywomens, the fifth the Beggars, the fixth for fuch as are infected with the Venereal Diftemper, and the feventh that of the Gypfies. They are in a fine Plain furrounded with Mountains, and are much of the fame Degree of Heat as the King's Bath in England.

Effeck

Effeck is famous for its Bridge, Five Miles long, and about Thirty Yards broad; it stands over the Drave, a League above its Confluence, with the Danube. It had Rails on each Side, and Towers of Wood at eve-'y Quarter of a Mile. It confifts of thick Oaken Planks, supported by great Trees, Nine or Ten in a Rank between every Arch, to that it took up an incredible Quantity of Timber. It was burnt feveral Times, and repair'd again: But in the Year 1687 the Duke of Lorrain put an End to this Work, ruining in few Days the Labour of Eight thousand Men for many Months. Soon af-ter enfued the decifive Battle that put Effeck and the Bridge into the Hands of the Imperialists, in whole Possession it still continues.

Buda, the Metropolis of Hungary is fituate over-againft Pef, there being a Communication by a Bridge of Boats half a Mile long. It ftands on a Hill, and was hererofore very great and rich, until it fell into the Hands of the Turks, who ruin'd moft of its ftately Houfes and Palaces. It is divided into Upper and Lower; the Lower is weak, but the Upper by its natural Situation is one of the ftrongeft Forts in the World, and has a very ftrong Caltle on the Weft. In the Lower Town there are Eight hot Baths, and and a cold one, adorn'd very much by the Turks, who are great Lovers of Bathing.

Gran

Gran, once the Refidence of the Kings of Hungary, is leated in a fruitful Country affording great Quantity of generous Wines, beautify'd with feveral flately Buildings, particularly a Caftle, the Archbifhop's Palace, and a noble Cathedral. The City is very flrong, divided into two Parts, and a feparate Fort upon a Hill, fo that an Enemy has three Towns to attack inflead of one. The lower Town is defended by two large Towers, one on the Weft-fide, the other on the North facing the River, and they are join'd by a Wall fortified with divers Redoubts, and a Ditch flank'd with hewen Stone, befides a Terrafs inclos'd with flrong Palifades, and four great Ravelins.

Shut is an Ifland form'd by the Danube, beginning at Presburg, and ending at Comora, being 30 Miles long, and 16 broad, divided and interfected into many Parts by feveral Chanels of the River; the Malecontents posted themfelves in it, but after feveral Eucounters were dispers'd by General Heister, April the 20th 1704.

Newkerkel is a pretty little Country-Town, remarkable only for a Chapel in it, with a Red Pinnacle built by King Richard the First of England, who was kept Prifoner in Aufria in his Return from the Holy Land, whole Ransom built the Old Wall of Vienna.

Spital is a little Village in the Mountains, the Way to it being of a very great Afcent, infomuch' that you must have two or three Couple of Oxen, or many Horfes to draw up up your Calash. From hence to Michoufrock is one Mile, to Kingberg three and a half, indifferent good way, to Coffenburg two Miles and a half, to Prouch one little Mile; it is a fine large City; to Luinne two Miles good way along the Banks of a pleasant River. to Crauber three, fine way through pleasant Vallies.

Gratz lies on the South of all these Places, It is the Metropolis of the Dutchy, 60 Miles South-East from Vienna; 'tis a neat City in a fine fruitful Country, fortified with a Wall and Ramparts, and almost impregnable by Reafon of a Castle on a high Hill, which commands the neighbouring Country. In the Duke's Palace there is a pretty good Library, confifting of two Rooms very well flock'd with printed Books and Manuferipts : in a Gallery is a Repofitory of Curiofities, with a Collection of American and Indian Idols. The Jefuits have here a College richly endowed with great Privileges, where they give Degrees in all Faculties, and have abundance of Scholars. This Town is the Governour's Place of Refidence, as it was formerly of fome Archdukes, who took their Title from it.

Judenburg is a fair and well built Town on the Banks of the River Muer, noted for two great annual Tairs; the Duke of Stiria has a Palace here, little inferior to that of Gratz, where his Deputy relides. The Jefuits have a College endow'd with the Revenues of a Dominican Monastery: The Country about eight English Miles down the G 4 River

River isvery pleafant and fruitful; the People very poor, and mighty dirty in their Cloaths and Diet, many Dumb and Deaf naturally, and are very fubject to fwelling Throats, fuppos'd to be occasion'd by the Snow-water which they use for their drink. They eat a Sort of Beans and Pease, which in other Countries Hogs are fed with. It is 40 Miles distant from Gratz.

St. Veit is a wall'd Town, and has 6 Churches; in the Piazza is a remarkable Fountain with a Bafon of white Marble made out of one Stone, about 5 Fathoms in Circumference. In fight of this Town there are four remarkable Hills, with a Chapel on each of them; to all thefe, upon a certain Day in the Year, the Inhabitants go on Foot out of Devotion, though in its Performance they must travel in Mifery about Thirty Miles.

From hence to Mauprouch are two Miles, good way, to Tieve two Miles, Part of the way which is pretty good, being along by a Lake, from whence to Villa there are 3 Miles; it is a pretty large Town with good Buildings, but low; to Holleftadt two Miles very bad way; the Town is but little, and feems very poor; from thence to Trevifa the Road is very bad.

Clagenfurt, the chief Town of Carintbia, is a fair Four-fquar'd Place, inclos'd with a handfome Wall, and very broad Ramparts, at each Corner there is a Bastion, and one in the middle of cach Curtain; the Streets are are uniform and ftreight; there is alfo a fine Piazza in the middle, beautified by the Luiberans when they had this Country; it is adorn'd with a Column of Marble, a Statue of the Emperor, and a noble Fountain in the midft; upon the Column ftands the Statue of the Virgin Mary, over againft which there is a large prodigious Dragon made out of one Stone, Hercules with his Club ftanding before it, which the common People think to be the Statue of a Boor, or Countryman, that kill'd the faid Dragon in thefe Parts.

Palma nova is one of the largest, and most regular Fortifications that I obferv'd in my Travels; it has nine Baftions, each bearing the Name of fome Noble Venetian; there is hardly any Exception against them but their round Ears : On each Curtain there are two Cavaliers, the Rampart is much higher than the Wall, upon which are planted 100 good Pieces of Ordinance, and there are many more ready upon all Occafions: The Ditch is 30 Paces broad, and 12 deep, kept dry, leaft it shou'd injure their deep Cellars, and render the Town less healthful. The Piazza is beautified in the Front with the Dome of the Church, and with divers Statues and Obelisks finely gilded; in the middle of the Place is fixed a Standard over a triple Wall, from whence one may fee the three Gates and fix Streets quite through the Town; in the Middle of the Bridge there is a Drawbridge made with fuch Artifice, that the Sen-

Sentinel may (when he difcovers any Forces coming) only by touching a certain Iron, draw up the Bridge. There is a Cut from the Sea to the Town capable of receiving good Veffels. It is efteen'd one of the Nobleft Fortifications in Europe.

Saltzburg is 60 Miles East by South from Munich, and so South-west from Passan; it is a very fair, well built and fortified City, adorn'd with an University and a ftately Palace for its Archbishop, having an impregnable Caffle on a Hill, and one of the moft magnificent Cathedrals in Europe. The Archbifhop is a Prince of the Empire, and by his Office Legate to the See of Rome in Germany; he fits on the first Bench next to the Electors. The great Hall belonging to the Caftle is well worth a Traveller's View, as also the Galleries, Tapeftries, and the Chambers of Rarities. The Gardens and Orchards abound with Pomegranates, Figs, and other choice Fruit; but the Archbishop's Pleasure-Garden is at Hellenbrun, a Mile diftant, where there are Noble Water-works with abundance of ftrange Beafts, Fowls, Fifhes, &c. of all borts, and at the further End two curious Profpects from two Houfes of Pleafure. The Publick Inns are fo fpacious, that they are capable of receiving the greatest Princes of the Empire with their Attendance.

Hallein is two German Miles from Saltzburg, famous for imploying a great Multitude of People in its Salt works. 1 was told, that in the Year 1563, there was found in a Salt

Salt-pit 6000 Foot Deep, in the middle of a hard Rock of Salt, a human Body with its Limbs, Hair, Cloaths, &c. uncorrupted, which, by its antique Drefs, feems to have lain there fome Ages; it is attefted by feveral Anthors, as Nicholfon, Megister and others.

Ratisbone is 60 Miles from Munich North by Eaft, and 31 Miles North-Eaft from Ingolfadt; it is fortified with good Walls, Bulwarks and Trenches. There is a ftately Stone Bridge over the Danuhe 1091 Foot long, and 39 broad, having 15 large Arches. The Town is fair, large, populous, and well built, adorn'd with a magnificent old Cathedral, and a ftately Caftle; there is in the Cathedral a curious Picture of St. Peter in a Ship, and another very confiderable one of the first Miffion of the Apostles.

The Dict caufes great Lufter to this City, it is not to be called in any other Place in Girmany, this being the fitteft for the Accommodation of fuch a Noble Convention. The Vice-Marfhal takes care to provide Lodgings for Perfons refpectively to their Dignity, and fees that all Things be brought thither at a juft Price; that the Hall or Place of Affembly be furnifh'd and adorn'd fuitable to the Dignity of the Perfons conven'd, and has a fpecial Eye and Regard to the publick Safety. By this Diet the great Concerns of Germany are much fecur'd, and the Peace and Quiet thereof eftablifh'd. Their Seats are in a large and ftately upper Room in the Town-

Town-hall richly hung with curious Tapeftry; the Emperor's Throne is cover'd with Cloth of Gold, and the Chairs and Benches of other Princes and States with Cloth of Silver, Velvet, Satin, according to their feveral Qualities.

Paffaw is feated on the Confluence of the Danube, with the Inn on one Side, and the Ilst on the other; fo that thefe three Rivers divide it into three Parts, wiz. Paffaw fo properly call'd, on the South-fide of the Danube, and on the Weft of the Inn; Instadt on the East-fide of the Inn, and South-fide of the Danube; and Ilstadt on the North-fide of the Danube, and the Banks of the Ilst. It is a rich, populous and trading City,

It is a rich, populous and trading City, 60 Miles Eaft South-Eaft from Ratisbone, and 68 from Vienna, near the Frontiers of Auftria. The Churches and publick Buildings are very Stately, but the private Houfes built with Wood: It is remarkable for many Meetings of the German Princes, particularly for that wherein the Peace was concluded in 155^2 , by which the Proteftants were allow'd the free Exercise of their Religion with the Confent of Charles the 5th then Emperor of Germany.

Ingolftadt is a Town very ftrongly fortified both by Nature and Art, and has a noble Caftle with very ftrong Walls, which enabled it to fuftain a long Siege of the Proteftants in 1546.and gave the first Check to the Progrefs of Guftavus Adolphus, who laid fiege to it in vain Anno 1632. It ftands on the Northfide fide of the Danube, over which it has a fine Bridge. It ftands about 43 Miles almost North from Munich, and 32 South-west from Ratifbone, built by a Tribe of the Suevi, call'd Angeli, and from thence call'd Angelost adium, and by Corruption Ingolstadt.

Nuremberg is one of the fineft Cities I faw in Germany; most of the Houses are of Free-Stone, and fix or feven Stories high, feveral being painted on the outfide, and adorn'd with gilded Balls on the Top, are very agreeable to the View. The Town is very Populous, although in a barren Country, without a navigable River. The three beft Churches are the Hofpital-Church, St. Lanrence, very large with two high Steeples in the Front, and St. Sebastians the best of the three, in this there is a Crucifix of Wood much esteem'd. The Castle stands upon a high Hill, from whence the Town makes a handfome Shew; in it are observable a very deep Well, the Emperor's Chapel, his Picture, and those of all the Electors, good Night Pieces, and one of a Man behind a white Transparent Curtain, very well express'd; the Armour of the great Sorcerer, and the Marks of his Horfe's Feet when he leap'd over the great Ditch. The Inhabitants wear a different Habit from the reft of the Germans; and no Place has a greater Number of Artificers in Steel, Iron, Brafs, Ivory and Wood.

of Heffe-Caffel, is feated in a pleafant and rich rich Plain upon the Banks of the River Fulda, 60 Miles South-west from Hannover; it is fortified with ftrong Walls, broad Ditches, a good Citadel, but the Fortifications are irregular, the Town well built, the Palace of hewen Stone, heautiful both without and within, having a large Court in the middle. There are two Riding-houses for managing the great Horfe, fine Gardens with curious Fountains. The Arfenal is a great Building wherein there are Arms for 25000 Men, and underneath 200 Canons, fome being fixtytwo Pounders: I faw there Muskets which under the Rammers have Darts that fpring out of the End of the Piece as foon as it is discharg'd. One may fee from the Palace fixty Towns, a Profpect not to be match'd any where. The Library is very well fur-nish'd with Books and Curiofities: There are in the City four Churches, in the Cathedral are the Monuments of the Landgraves.

Blenbeim is a Village about nine Miles North from Hoeffudt, famous for the taking of twenty Battalions of Foot, and twelve Squadrons of Dragoons (after a ftout Refiflance) by the Earl of Orkney and the Lords Cutts at the Battle of Hoeffudt.

Hocftadt belongs to the Duke of Newburg, it is defended by a ftrong Caftle, and famous for the memorable Victory obtain'd by Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlboreugb over Count Tallard and Marsin, with the Elector of Bavaria, Anno 1704. in Memory of which there is a Noble Pillar crected in the Field of Battle with an Infeription upon it.

Donawert, on the North fide of the Danube, is defended by a ftrong Caltle indifferently fortified, and continued fo till the Year 1607. when it was profeib'd for embracing the Proteftant Religion.

Near it flands Schellemberg, famous for the Defeat of the French and Bavarians, chiefly owing to the Courage of the Britains.

Newburg, on the South-fide of the Danube, ¹² Miles. Weftward of Donawert, is noted for a Statue of the Virgin, known commonly by the Name of our Lady of Newburg, to which the Superfitious aferibe Miraeles. The chief Trade of this Town is in Wine, which is fold weekly in the publick Markets. The Duke has a great Revenue from the Toll of Veffels that pafs up and down the Danube, over which there is a Bridge.

Augsburg is a free Imperial City, encompafs'd with a ftrong Wall, beyond which there is a Ditch 25 Paces broad, fill'd with Water from a little River that runs through the Town; there are befides fine Ramparts with 11 Baftions, Fauffebrays, a good Counterfearp, feveral Half-Moons before the Curtains, all fac'd with Brick, and Cavaliers on fome of the Baftions all along the Walls, and within the Town; the Soldiers of the Garrifon have pretty Barracks affign'd them. The City is large and populous; the Territory contains forty Bailiwicks and Lordfhips. The

The Magistrates are half Lutherans, half Papifts, and their Common-Council has 150 of each. The publick Buildings are Magnificent, but the Glory of the Town is that call'd The Fuggery, which confifts of feveral flately Streets and fair Palaces built by the Noble Family of the Fuggers, inhabited by poor People who have a great Pension from that Illustrious Family. The Town-hall is fecond to that of Amsterdam. The Arfenal one of the best furnish'd in Germany. The Secret Gate is a curious Entrance into the Town; a Horseman may go out and in at all Hours of the Night, paying Six Stivers, and two for a Footman. The Jews are confin'd to a separate Place, and for every Hour they flay in other Parts of the City, are o blig'd to pay a Florin ; they make Chains of Steel fo very fine of a Span long, that when they put it about the Neck of a Flea, it will lift it up when it leaps, and they fell them for 10 Stivers. Their Organ is very remarkable, it was 23 Years a making, being 92 Foot high, and 28 broad; it has 16 Pair of Bellows, and above 3000 Pipes of pure Eng. lifth Tin, the largeft of which is 40 Inches in Circumference, and above 13 in Diameter. They fay, the Cathedral (wherein thele Organs fland) was III Years a building. There is a vaft Number of Roman Monuments in and about this City, a famous Library, many noble Fountains with Brass Starues of different Figures, and fome of the Emperors. Munich

I

Munich is the chief City of Bavaria, and Refidence of the Elector; it flands about 6 Miles from Inspruck, one of the most pleafant, rich and populous Cities of Germany; the Ifar runs through many of the Streets, which makes the richer Citizens have fine Fountains, and Water-works in their Houfes. It is govern'd by a Common-Council of 26, whereof r2 are call'd the Outer-boufe, and the reft the Inner; over all there are fix Aldermen, as Superintendants, who ufually are Perfons of good Extraction.

The most remarkable Building is the Elector's Palace, a Royal Structure, fit to re-Ceive the greatest Monarch in Europe, with all his Attendants and Guards : It would be endlefs to give a particular Defeription of all the Curiofities in it, of the noble Fountains, the feveral Water-works and Grotto's, the famous Library; the Jesuits College is a Princely Fabrick, next to the Escurial in Spain. reckon'd the ftatelieft: This is the lairest City in Germany in my Opinion; the Streets are broad and regular; in the Elector's Gardens there are a vast Number of Aloe-trees, Europe can hardly produce the like for Stalks and Flowers. There is an English Nunnery, in the Church whereof English Prayers are faid. The Parlour of Perspectives is extremely fine, but the Hall of Antiquities brought hither from Rome, exceeds all the reft.

The great Hall is full of rare historical Pictures, the Sacred on the one Side, and che the Profane on the other; the Furniture of the Palace is rich beyond Imagination; in the Treafury there are whole Services of Gold, a vaft Number of Pearls, Diamonds, Rubics, and other precious Stones: Among the Rarities there is a Cherry-ftone with 140 Heads diffinctly engraven upon it, and a Boat of Palm-tree Wood turn'd into a Stone; towards whatever Side a Man eafls his Eye in this Palace he fees fomething extremely delightful.

Koffftein is 7 Miles North-East from Infpruck upon the River Inn, poffefs'd by the Duke of Bavaria by Accident in the Year 1703for two Houfes near one of the Bastions being fet on Fire by the Imperial Garifon within ro prevent their being a Shelter to the Enemy, the Wind drove the Flames upon two Powder-Towers which thereby were immediately blown up, and carried with them the best Part of the Bastion; but after the Reduction of Bavaria in the following Year, it return'd to the Emperor.

Inspruck stands 66 Miles North-East from Trent in Italy, a well built Town, especially the Suburbs, where there are many stately Houses; it is feated in a fertile Valley, populous enough, and has a Noble Cassle and good Buildings; here is the famous Monastery of Wilden, the Monks fay, their Founder was a Prince of a Gigantick Stature, twelve Foot and a half high; they pretend to shew his Tongue, which is three Spans and a half long, keeping it as a valuable Relick.

Relick. The Monaftery is encompafs'd with a Wall fixteen Foot high, which, they fay, was leaped over by a Stag, when clofely purfued by Dogs fome Years ago.

Ponteba, Thodefca, and Venetiana upon the River Fella, are the exact Confines between the Venetian and Imperial Dominions; on One Side of the Bridge live Italians, fubject to the Venetians; ond on the other Germans, fubject to the Emperor; on one Side their Buildings, Manner of Living, empty Rooms, large Windows, and Iron-Bedfteds fhew them to be Italians; on the other Side immediately their Stoves, higher Bedfteds, Feather-Beds one over another, fquare Tables, and their Bafon and Towel by the Wall, declare them to be Germans: The Bridge it felf is half Italian half German, one Part being built with Stone, and the other with Trees laid over after the German Fafhion of making Bridges.

When you come from Germany, you muft be provided with a Paffport of Health, for I have feen fome forc'd to go back, having not had that Caution; otherwife they would oblige you to keep your Quarentine, or forty Days, before you fhould be permitted to enter into the Venetian Territories, which is a miferable Confinement where you are forrily entertain'd, and pay extreme dear; neither do they give fuch as are in that Confinement any Victuals, but on the End of a long Pole, as if they really had the Plague.

From

From Pontebo to Refuta is Three Miles thro' Mountains, along the Tajamento, croffing in the Way Four Bridges. From thence to Venfon Two Miles, we were ferried over a Mile and a half from the Town. To Hofpital there is but half a Mile, and from thence to Faude Three; further to Conciliano Two Miles, from whence you are ferried over in a large Boat to Trevifo, which is but Four Miles diffant: It gives its Name to the Country. It is a very handfome, large, and pleafant, Town, adorn'd with good Houfes. It is vaulted all along the great Street, which affords a great Conveniency to walk under. Here are fine Churches, Towers, and Fountains. The Country is plontiful, chiefly in Fruit and Wine.

Maestre is Two Miles distant from Trevis, a very pretty Town, 'and the best Place of Accommodation for such as intend to travel into Germany by Tirol and Carintbia, ot into Austria by Frinli, and likewise for those that intend to make the Tour of Italy. Here is the same Conveniency of walking under Vaults, as in Treviso.

From hence to Venice they count about Two Miles by Water, in a very convenient Sort of Boat, call'd Gondola, in a fine large Canal, on each Side of which, half the Way, is a very pleafant Champaign Country. Upon the Way fome Sbyrrbi's, or Officers, meet yon, that fearch your Trunks, but not very ftrictly, and if you have any Thing

Thing prohibited, in giving them a fmall Matter they will take no Notice. The City has neither Gates, Walls, nor Citadel; and yet cannot be faid to be weak. Here is a greater Number of Lovely Women rhan in any Place in Europe. All the Streets are narrow and erooked, but fo clean, that one may walk a whole Year over them without meeting with any Dirt. When you visit the Treasure of St. Mark, they will shew you among other Things a Stone, which they pretend to be the fame that yielded Water to the Iraelites when they were oppress'd with Thirst in the Wilderness. If this be true, we must allow that Rock a Power to multiply its Kind; for it is still to be feen in the Defarts of Arabia, as I have been told by feveral credible Perfons.

The Ducal Palace is a magnificent Stru-Aure, and has many noble Appartments for the Doge, and the feveral Councils and Courts. There is also belonging to it a little Arfenal with Arms for a Thousand Men, the Fire-Arms being ready charg'd, and the Swords and Pikes fo plac'd, that by pulling a String they fall down in Order to be taken up. This is for the Security of the Doge and Senate in cafe of any Plot or Surprize. The Church of St. Mark is an ancient, folid, and maffy Structure, with Five low Domes cover'd with Lead: The Front has Five Gates adorn'd with Columns of Porphyry and fine Marble; and over all is a Gallery with Balifters along the Front. Upon Four Pedeftals H 2

Pedestals over the greatest Gate are plac'd Four flately Horfes of Brass gilt, whereof the Workmanship is incomparable: They were prefented to Nero, to be put to the Chariot of the Sun for an Ornament to his Triumphal Arch after the Romans had overcome the Parthians. The Treafury confifts of Relieks counted facred, and the Keys are kept by a Procurator of St. Mark's They pretend to have the Body of that Saint, and the Original of his Gospel writ by himfelf, some of our Saviour's Blood, and some of the Thorns wherewith he was crown'd, one of which all the Senators do worship upon Allowedne day. Among the richeft Things of the Treafury are Twelve Golden Croffes adorn'd with precious Stones, Twelve Golden Crowns of great Weight, Six large Rubies, the biggeft of which weighs Six Ounces, the Crown or Cap with which the Doge is crown'd, fet with the richeft Jewels and Pearls of unknown Value, &c. The Steeple is very remarkable, from the Top of which none of the Canal can be feen (tho in great Numbers) by reafon of the Narrownefs of the Streets.

The Republick is under an Ariffocratical Government, the Sovereignty of the State being lodg'd in the Nobility, or certain Number of Families enroll'd in the Golden Book, call'd the Register of the Venetian Nobles. The young Women of Quality are kept in Monasteries, never seen abroad but difguis'd; and their Sweet-hearts are fearce fcarce allow'd to fee them until the Day of Marriage, and then they earry them home, and lock them in a Room, keeping them there, where they have fome Vifits of their Husbands; neither are they permitted to go ont, except it be to Church, or in the Time of the Carnaval, and always have One or Two Matrons or Spies after them. The Palaces are fo numerous, that they are fufficient to adorn Ten Cities, being Four hundred in Number, and on the great Canal alone there are at leaft Two hundred, which feem to out Rival one another, adorn'd with fine Courts, Anticourts, delicious Gardens, Fountains, Grotto's, and all other Embellifilments.

When the Redotti, or Gaming-Houfes, are open in Carnaval Time, prodigious Sums of Money are loft at Baflet. None are admitted into these Houses but such as are mask'd. The Nobles keep the Bank, and relieve one another from Morning till Night, who feem but little concern'd when they lofe a Thouland Shekins by one Card, no more than when they win but one by another. I have feen the Bank broke twice or thrice; but could never see the least Sign of Discontent in the unfortunate Nobleman that kept it. They will play with the Lofer upon his Word to the Value of Ten thousand Ducats, which are always punctually raid next Morning.

H4

There

There is a prodigious Number of Gondola's, being about 25000; and the Dexterity of the Boat-Men is almost incrediblo, for tho the Canals are narrow, and in feveral Places crofs one another, yet they feldom or never run foul of one another; to avoid it they give Warning to those that are within the Reach of their Voice, who answer in a Dialect only known to themfelves, fuch as Preci, Prami, Sia, which they understand fo well, that they turn their Gondola's, and pafs without touching one another. Here is kept the finest and richest Fair in Europe in the Place of St. Mark, and in the Broglio: The Shops are rank'd with fuch a harmonious Proportion and Uniformity, that one would imagine that it was a City built on Purpole for Pleafure. It is the Cuftom of the Place, during the Carnaval and Fair, that any Man may ask the laft Favour of a Woman whom he finds alone with a Vizard-Mask. The whole Carnaval, and the Festival after Afconfion-Day, is fpent in Maskerading : And all that While there feems to be a new Republick form'd in the Midft of the other. There is an univerfal Change in the Habits, Cuftoms, and Laws: All Marks of Superiority and Diftinction are forgotten, or ar least neglected: All Perfons feem to be equal: Respect, Constraint, Ceremony, Care, and Business, are banish'd from Society, and are fucceeded by Joy, Liberty, and an agreeable Sort of Folly.

You

You may have a Gondola with Two Men for Setté Liré (which is Three Shillings and Sixpence English Money) a Day. The Washing is pretty dear, and spoils the Linen much; for if you don't pay a great Price shey will wash with Salt Water to fave the buying of Fresh. Wood is also very dear, and bought by the Pound. When you go to fee the Arfenal, a Gold Ducar will pay for as many Persons as you please to carry along with you.

If you intend to go to Rome, and have not a Calefh of your own, you may agree with the Voiturin at Fourteen Duears each for all Things, and Buona Mancha. Here you may provide your felf at a cheap Rate with Theriaque or Venice-Treaele, Lids for Boxes with Pictures, Tooth-pick Cafes, Powder of Viper, fine Silk Stuffs, and Handkerchiefs; likewife with Stockings, if you don't intend to go to Naples, where they are cheaper.

From hence to Chiousa are counted Twenty five Italian Miles. We went by Water along an Island Eighteen Miles in Length, in a Chanel separated from the Sea by a fine Dike: The Inhabitants are all Water-Men. Here are very good Oysters to be had. Hence to,

Delponto are Fifty Miles: We enter'd the Canal Bianco, which comes from the Adige; and when we got out we enter'd into Po grande: The Canal is about Sixteen Miles, and we went the remaining Thirty four upon on the Po: We lay at a little Village call'd St. Crepin :

From hence we went Three Miles to Ferrara upon a little, but very pleafant, Canal. The Way by Land is very good alfo. The Place is much decay'd fince it came into the Hands of the Popes: So that although it be a large and handfome City, it is ill peopled, and poor: It has too many Houfes in Proportion to the Inhabitants. The Churches and Palaces are ftill magnificent, chiefly that of the ancient Dukes, where the Pope's Legate now refides. The Townhoufe is a ftately Edifice; as alfo is the Citadel in a pretty good Condition, built by Pope Clement the Eighth to curb the Inhabitants, and coft him 2000000 of Crowns; but the reft of the Fortifications were much neglected until the late War. There is a Canal from the Po hither Six Miles long.

Ravenna is feated in an open Country upon a River Three Miles from the Sea, tho formerly it was joining to it, and was the beft Harbour the Romans had on the Adriatick. The Iron Rings, that were formerly to faften the Ships to, are ftill to be feen. The Plains round about it are reckon'd the moft fruitful in Italy. It was formerly the Delight and Sanctuary of the Emperor Honorius, and the Refidence of feveral Kings, and Exarchs, or Lientenants; of the Eastern Emperors. It is now very ill peopled, and the Houfes but indifferent, and their once magnificent Churches

Churches in a decaying Condition: The Cathedral is supported by Sixty fix Pillars of Grecian Marble. There is in the Church of St. Vitalis a Pillar scarce to be match'd any where, containing in it almost all precious Stones. The Archbishop's Cathedral is a noble Structure.

Arezzo is about Thirty feven Miles South-East from Florence, a very ancient Town, well built; noted for its Earthen Ware, for the Birth of the Poet Aretin, (call'd the Scourge of Princes, because of his Satyrs,) and of Guido the Musician, a Benedictine Monk, who invented the Musical Notes about the Year 1028, taking them from the first Syllables of the Hymn of St. John the Baptist, fung in the Roman Churches, viz.

Ut queant laxis, Refonare fibris Mira gestorum

Famuli tuorum Solve polluti Labii reatum

St. Marino, about Nine Miles from Rimini, is a fmall Town, but very ftrong by its Situation on a high Mountain: It has Three Caftles within its Walls, govern'd by Two Captains, who are chang'd every Six Months, under the Protection of the Pope. All its Tetritories confift of one Mountain about Nine or Ten Miles in Circuit, and containing Four Villages, Eight Corn-Mills, and Two Powder ones. The Arms of this fmall Commonwealth are Three Towers

ers on a Mountain, with this Motto underneath,

Libertas perpetua.

The Town is wall'd on one Side, and the other is defended by a dreadful Precipice. Their Government is by a Council of Forty five, of which Fifteen are Gentlemen, Fifteen Tradefmen, and Fifteen Countrymen: They continue during their Lives; and when any one of them dies, another of the fame Rank is chofen in his Place. They choofe Two Confuls every half Year, and Two Thirds of the Votes carry the Election. The Streets are narrow, and the Houfes mean.

Immola is a pretty large Town in a Champaign Country. All the Women here wear little Straw-Hats, like Earthen Difhes. Fron hence to, Fayensa are Twelve Miles: The Way is very fine, the Town very long, and a Suburb join'd by a Bridge.

We travell'd Twenty Miles through a fine Champaign Country to Forli, or Forum Julii, from thence to Cezena, Ten Miles through a very pleafant Country. The City is large, with a Caftle over it. We ferried over a Quarter of a Mile from the City, and went on Twenty Miles further to,

Rimini, formerly call'd Ariminium, a large City in a pleafant Country. Here is a fine Foun-

Fountain in the Market-Place: The Town-Hall is very beautiful, and newly built out of the Stones of an Amphitheater.

Departing from hence we went Ten Miles further to La Catholica, the first Five Miles the Road was very good, but the rest bad. From thence to Pefaro are Ten Miles more, pretty good Way: In this Town are Two Market-Places very large, wherein there are Two very fine Fountains. Without the Town are to be feen several handsome Palaces. From hence to, Fano are Ten Miles more of very good Way, along the Gulf upon the Sands. The Town is very large, and well fortified after the old Way.

From hence we went to Singola, Twenty two Miles along the Sea-fide. The Town is pretty large, and well built; the Cathedral very fine, the Pulpit whereof is very handfome.

Ancona ftands Twenty two Miles from this Place: The Town is very ftrong; the Haven formerly of great Repute. Here is a triumphal Arch very confiderable. We lay Two Miles off.

From this Place to Loretto are counted Lighteen Miles. The Avenues of which Place are extream pleafant by reafon of the long and delightful Profpects that are on each Side of the Way; but going up to the Town, the Road is very fteep. We met with many Beggars, who will not ask Alms for God or Chrift's Sake, but for the Souls

in

in Purgatory. The Town lies near the Gulf of Venice, upon a high Ground, pretty well fortified, but without a Guard. It is noted particularly for the Chapel of La Madona, or Our Lady, to which the Papifts go in Pilgrimage from all Parts of Europe. They precend that the Angel deliver'd the Meffage to the Virgin of her Conception in that fame Chamber, and that there our Saviour was incarnated. It was (they fay) transported by Angels (when the Turks became Masters of the Holy Land) from Nazareth to Dalmatia, and from thence hither about Three Years and Seven Months after by the fame Angels, who plac'd it in a Foreft belonging to a Widow call'd Loretto, from whence the Town took its Name. Alter a While it was transported after the fame Manner a Mile further, into the Middle el a Field poffeffed by Two Brothers, who quar-relling about the Property and Title of it, it was pleas'd to decide the Controverfy by removing into a neighbouring Highway, where it now ftands. No Man of Senfe can believe fuch ridiculous Fables, but fuch as are given to ftrong Illusions. This little House stands in the Middle of a spacious Church built fince, and is inclos'd in a mag-nificent Cafe of White Marble, at half a Foot Diltance from the Houfe it felf, furrounded with Two Rows of White Marble Statues, made by the beft Masters: The uppermost reprefents the Sybills, and the lowermost the ancient Prophets. The House :5

it felf is of a harden'd Brick : It is almost quare with a Window, and had anciently but one Door, but now it has four. Therein is a vast Number of Gold and Silver Lamps continually burning: At the upper. End there is a Silver Altar, and before it a Lamp of Gold, fo heavy that it is as much as Two Men can carry. On each Side of the Wall are Two large Branches of Maffy Gold, twifted like Cornu Copia. The Window through which the Angel is faid to enter, when he faluted her, is adorn'd with Silver. Behind the Altar there is a large Iron Grate croffing the Chapel, to part the House from it. The Statue of Cedar of the Virgin with our Saviour in her Arms, both black, are faid to have been made by St. Luke, and brought hither with the Crofs. It has a Vail embroider'd with Diamonds and Pearls, valued at Forcy thousand Crowns: Upon their Heads there are Two Crowns full of Diamonds, given by Anna of Austria, Queen of France. Behind one of which there, are these Verfes:

Tu Caput ante meum cinxisti virgo Corona, Nunc Caput ecce tuum nostra Corona teget.

The Niche where the Statue flands is adorn'd with a Rain-Bow of precious Stones. In fhort, the Prefents of Jewels, and Services for the Altar of Gold, Silver, and precious Stones, exceed all Belief in Number and Value: The Chapel and Treafury are full of 'em; the laft has a vaft Number of Cupboard; boards cover'd with Wire, where the richeft Prefents are kept. There is an Altar-Cloth valued at 140000 Crowns. They have the largeft and nobleft Cellars in Italy, with prodigious large Veffels of Wine for the Accommodation of Prinees, Cardinals, Ambaffadors, and other great Men, as well as Pilgrims, who are fo numerous fometimes, that there has been between Eafter and Whitfuntide 60 or 70000 Communicants, and in Two Days Time about the Nativity of our Lady 200000.

The Apothecary's Shop is also very remarkable; among other Things, for the great Pots flanding round it painted by Raphael Urbin, which are of luch Value, that a French Ambassiador offer d for Four of them (painted with the Pictures of the Four Evangelist) Pots of Massive Gold of the same Size, but could not obtain them.

The Town confifts chiefly of one Street. In the greateft Square there is a noble Fountain of Marble, beautified with feveral Brafs Statues, and one of Pope Sixtus V. The Inhabitants chief Livelihood is making and felling of Beads, Medals, and fuch like Trifles. We paid one Ducat only for feeing all.

From Loretto we went to Recanata, Three Miles diflant. It is a long little Town, feated in a very fine Champaign Country, where we fometimes met with pleafant little Hillocks, and delightful Valleys, all full of Almond and Olive-Trees. From hence to Macerata are Fifteen Miles, thence to Varchimara chimara Nineteen in the Mountains, the Way being both good and pleafant, all full of Green Trees. From whence we proceeded to Font de la Draba, Eight Miles, very good Way, coafting along the Mountains; To Faravella, in the Mountains, Eight Miles; to Fulino Fifteen Miles, troublefome Way, by reafon the Pavement being of very large Stones, and fleep, it is very uneafy to Men and Horles. From thence we advane'd Twelve Miles of very good Way to, Spoleto, feated in a delicious Champaign Country, cover'd with Vineyards, Olive, Almond, and Fig-Trees. In the Cathedral there is a Pavement of very fine Marble, of different Colour and Size: The Frontifpiece in Mofaick is very beautiful. There is alfo an extraordinary long and high Bridge to convey Water into the Town.

Terni is about Fifteen Miles futther. Five Miles and a half from this Place is to be feen an extraordinary Cafcade: the Fall is exceeding high, a Rain-Bow furrounding always the Water when the Sun fhines : The River comes out of a fine long Plain. Whofoever would fee the Place must hire Horfes in Terni for Four Jules each, and the fame for the Guide. Though you have Horfes, yet you must walk the greatest Part of the Mountain, there being dangerous Precipices for above a Mile.

About Seven Miles further we came to Narni, the Way; being very good, and the Country mighty pleafant. Near the Town there is a very difficult Defcent. From thence we proceeded in our Journey, and after Seven Miles of very pleafant Way we arriv'd at Orricoli; from whence we went to Civitta Caftelli, being Twelve Miles, the Way ill pav'd, and very bad both for the Calefh and Horfemen. From hence we advanc'd Seven Miles in the Via Flaminia to Caftelnuovo, the Road being very good; and then Sixteen Miles further to,

Rome; in the Way to which, viz. Six Miles from it, we came to La Prima porta Hofteria, and about a Mile and a half from Rome we went over a fine Bridge upon the Tiber, where appear'd to Conftantine the Great in the Heavens a Crofs with this Infeription:

In hoc Signo vinces.

From the Bridge to the City there is a fine latge Pavement, very pleafant by reafon of the fine Villa's and Gardens that are on each Side. At the Entrance of the Gate they order'd a Soldier to go along with us to the Cuftom-Houfe, to have our Trunks fearched; but they do it pro Forma, without Exactnefs; and for about a Jule for each Trunk, (which is near Sixpence English Money) and asmuch to the Fellow that went along with us from the Gate; we were immediately difpatched.

This famous City is fo remarkable, that one cannot walk Fifry Paces in and about it withour observing fome Remains of its an-eient Grandeur. The Churches and Chapels are reckon'd to be about Three hundred in Number; the chief of which is that of St. Peter, accounted the most noble and majeftick Structure of the whole World of that Kind. There is fo great a Variety of fine Gilt Work, rare Pictures, Statues of Brafs and Marble, that it strikes the Beholder with Admiration. The adorning only of St. Peter's Chair coft 107551 Roman Crowns, each Crown being Five Shillings and Sixpence English Money. The Length of the Church within, from East to West, is counted 594 Feet; the Length of the Crofs, from North to South, 438; the Breadth of the Body 86, the Height of it 144; the Height of the Cupela to the Top of the Iron ' Crofs 432; the Hollow of the Ball, upon which the Crofs stands, can contain Seventeen Perfons within; the Circumference of the Cupola without is 620, the Diameter within 143; the Space before the Entrance is a large Plain, encompass'd with a Piazza of a circular Form, having a ftately Obelisk in the Middle, and a large Fountain on cach Side. There is almost round about Four Rows of great Marble Pillars. The Obelisk confifts of one Stone of fpeckled Marble without Hieroglyphicks, and counting the Balis, is 108 Foot high, supported by Four Brass Lions gilt. Oppolite to the Five Doors of I 2 the the Porch are the Five Doors of the Church, one of which (call'd the Holy Gate) is open'd only in the Year of the Jubilce, the reft are open'd every Day. Under the Center of the Cupola stands the high Altar of St. Peter, half of whofe Body, as well as half of that of St. Paul, they pretend is buried here. Over it there is a flately Canopy of Brafs, wrought about the Edge with Vallances, and a Fringe of the fame Mettle gilt, fupported by Four Brafs Pillars. Upon the Corner of the Canopy stand Four Angels of Brafs gilt, and on the Middle a Globe of Brafs, with a Crofs of the fame Mettle on the Top, all gilt. The Pillars are of a Scrpentine Form, wreath'd about with Vines of Brafs, and beautified with little Angels climbing on the Branches. There are Twenty fix Chapels within the Church, each of which has fomething remarkable. In fhort, this Church may pals for the Eighth Wonder of the World. Since the Reparation of it was begun, until the Year 1700, it has colt Forty two Millions of Roman Crowns. There is above Twenty thousand Livres per Annum allow'd for its Maintenance.

In Rome there are an Hundred and eighteen Palaces, Ten Colleges, Eighteen curious Gardens, the Ruins of Eight ancient Palaces, Cirques, Baths, and Temples, Twenty fix Piazza's or Squares. The Antiquities worth the Obfervation of the curious are thefe, wiz. the Ruins and Remains of Pagan Temples, Theatres, Amphitheatres, Cirques, Baths

Baths, Aqueducts, Obelisks, Triumphal Arches,' Pillars, Mausolea's, Statues, Altars, Grave-Stones, Instruments for Sacrifices, ancient Lamps and Urns.

There are the Remains of Nineteen Pagan Temples, of Six Baths, among which that of Disclession, (which had Places for 3200 Perfons to Bath in without feeing one another) and that of Antoninus Caracalla, which had 1600 Seats of polish'd Marble : There are 11 Obelisks, of which that of St. John of Lateran is the greatest, being 112 Foot high, 9 and a half broad one way, and 9 the other; there are 6 Triumphal Arches still remaining; four Columns, the most remarkable of which is that of Trajan, of white Marble 140 Foot high, including the Basis; it has a Pair of Stairs within of 192 Steps (by which one afcends to the Top) and 42 finall Windows to let in the Light. That of Antonine is much like this, 175 Foot high, it has 206 Steps within, and 56 fmall Windows.

The City is about thirteen Miles in Com-País, the Inhabitants are reckon'd about 120000, befides Strangers, whereof here is always a great Multitude. It is generally well built, the Streets are ftreight, beautified with Palaces and Churches; the Vatican contains 12000 Rooms; in the Hall where the Pope gives Audience to Ambaffadors, there are Pictures representing and approving the barbarous Murder of the French Admiral Coligni, and the Maffacre of the French Protestants, I 2

testants, upon which Pope Gregory the 13th caus'd Medals to be struck, with his own Name on the Face, and on the Reverse an Angel with a Cross in one Hand, and a Sword in the other, under it this Inscription, Hugenotorum Strages, 1572.

The Vatican Library is near a Mile long, mighty confiderable for its Books, but not lo well look'd after as it ought to be. There is in Rome 92 Parifhes, 41 different National Churches, 64 Religious Houfes for Men, above 40 for Women; 30, Hofpitals, and 116 Societies for Penitents. There are 18 Gates; the Caftle of St. Angelo has 4 Baftions, call'd after the four Evangelifts; in a little Arfenal within the Caftle is kept the Pope's Triple-Crown.

The Catacombs, fo much fam'd by Authors, are very numerous in and about the City; they are cut out in the Manner of Streets under Ground; the Papifts alledge, that these are the Places where ancient Chrislians worshipped and buried their Martyrs in Times of Perfecution, but I rather believe them to be the publick Burying-place of the ancient Roman Heathens. St. Peter's Prifon, not far from the Palace of Augustus, has feveral remarkable Things; the miraculous Fountain that fprung (as they fay) by his Prayers, that he might christen the Gaoler and his Family ; the Water has the Tafte of Whey, and you may take as much as you pleafc please without any perceptible Diminution, which doubtlefs is true; for there are Hole; in the Stone under Water unperceiv'd, which give way to the Water to fupply what was taken out; and there being, as I suppose, a Canal underneath, the Quantity that can be taken will not be perceiv'd. In going down on the Right Hand you'll fee a Marble-Stone cover'd with a little Iron-Grate, upon which Stone they fhew you the Print of St. Peter's Cheek, who not going down fast chough, the Soldier gave him to hard a Slap on one Cheek, that the other hitting against this Stone, imprinted it felf in that Manner.

The Chapel Paulina is remarkable for the last Judgment painted on the Wall of the great Altar by Michael Angelo Bonaretta, 'tis reckon'd one of the best Pieces that ever was made. The Aula Regia is remarkable for the Hiftory of Pope Alexander the Third, and of the Emperor Frederick Barbaroffa, in which the former expresses an excessive Pride, the latter a base Submiffion. The Pope's Gardens are very curious for their Water-works, there is a furprizing one in Form of a Ship, which fprinkles Water from all Parts of its Sails and Cordage in great Plenty ; it has Guns that fhoot with incredible Noife, and all by the Strength of Water. In one of the Palaces of the Capitol in St. John de Lateran there is the Christening-Table of Constantine, the Table of the Supper of Jefus Chrift with his Disciples, the Ark IA

Ark of the Covenant of the Hebrews, the Palloral Staff of Aaron, Mofes's Rod which he made use of when he struck the Rock in the Defart, from which Water sprung. In the great Farnese there is the Dirces tied by her Hair to the Horns of an Ox.

In Mount Janiculus we faw the Place where St. Peter was crucified with his Head downwards. We likewife were in the Church of St. Agnes, when two Lambs were hlefs'd by a Cardinal for the Pope's eating on Eafterday. Burguefes Palace is full of rare Pictures, whereof the chief is the Crucifix drawn by Michael Angelo Bonaretta, who facrifie'd a poor Man to his Ambition in the Church of the Oratorians, to have the Pleafure of making a rare Piece; for having tied him to a Crofs, he ftabb'd him to the Heart, that feeing him die, he might the more lively reprefent the Agonics of Death.

Without the Gate Oftiensa ftands the Church of St. Paul, or the three Fountainss call'd Aquæ falvæ, where, it is faid, that Apostele loss his Head; and that after the Decollation, the Head made three feveral Jumps, and in each of the three Places where it touch'd, there miraculously fprung a Fountain, all three of a different Tafte, viz. the one of Blood, the other of Milk, and the third of Water; all which cure any Sort of Diftemper. Note, That the Head jump'd at last as far as at first, for the Fountains are of a regular Diftance.

From

From Rome to Tivoli are twenty Miles, it is reckon'd to be the most beautifully situated of any Place in Italy, upon a Hill cover'd with Olive-trees for five or fix Miles, noted for fine Palaces, chiefly that of Cardinal D'Eff's, which has curious Gardens, delicate Fountains, reckon'd the fineft in Italy; there is the famous Cascade near the Denof the Sibylla Tiburtina; there are artificial Reprefentations of all Sorts of Birds chirping on the Trees in their natural Notes, all of them chattering at once at the Sight of an Owl howling upon a Tree. There are likewife Organs which play of themfelves by Water-works, and a Gyrondola of Serpents pouting up Water in a terrible Manner.

Frescati is 12 Miles from Rome, here is a very Noble Prospect into the neighbouring Country, which is adorn'd with the fine Seats of Cardinals and other Great Men. Near this Place lies the Villa Aldobrandina, call'd Belveder of Frescati, pleasantly seated on the Side of a Hill, where there are fine Gardens and curious Water-works; there is a Particular Gallery full of the most rare Pictures in Italy. In the Garden Pampbyllis there is a curious Cafcade, the Fountain of Alla fupporting the World, all of Brafs, caffing out Water to a prodigious Quantity. The other fine Cascade or Gyrondola form'd by the fame Water-works, which perfectly Imitates Thunder, Hail and Mifts, fome will pretend Snow likewife ; but I did not fee the laft when I was there : Apollo playing upon upon the Flute, a Centaurus founding ² Horn.

In a little Room backwards there is Mount Parnaffus, where are all the Mufes, each having her Mufical Inftrument in a readinefs to play; and by the Means of backward Machines and the Water-works, is heard a very pleafant Melody. The Palace of the Conftable Columna has excellent Apartments, and a furprizing Gallery, wherein is a Clofet of black Ebony, with a little Bas-relieve of Ivory, the Work whereof is incomparable, and has coft vaft Sums of Money; for the two Workmen had two Piftoles and a Barrel of Wine a Day during 22 Years that they were about making it.

We had the Curiofity of going to fee the Demoniacks, and I cannot imagine how the Priefts, who pretend to exorcife them, and have the Power of cafting the Devils out of them, can be guilty of teaching them fo many ridiculous cheating Tricks; for thefe miferable Creatures do continually utter Blafphemies moft intolerable to be heard; of them we faw four, viz. two Women, whereof one is about 30, the other about 20 Years of Age, a Girl about 9 or 10, and a Boy about 7; all which made furprizing Contorfions, chiefly that of 30, who, I fuppofe, had longer Time to learn; fometimes they were pretty quiet, but as foon as the Prieft order'd the Devils to fpeak, or anfiwer to his Queftions, then they were all in a ftrange Agitation. I took Notice of the little little Girl, who was mighty nimble at the Sport, and did not perceive the hurted her lelf at all, although the often ftruck her Head against the stony Ground; and the Woman of 30, after the Prieft had fhew'd her a Piece of the Crofs of Jefus Chrift inlaid with Silver, and had order'd the Devils. to come out of her, the prefently put her Head under the Priest's Heel, where she remain'd until he order'd her to get up : That of 20 had (as they fay) twelve Millions of Devils in her Body, and at once five hundred thousand came out of her; but the Day they fliew'd her unto 'us, there were only. five thousand that came out; at the Gate when you go away it is usual to give fome finall Matter.

The Air of this Country is generally temperate and healthful, except in the Church Territories, where it is reckon'd more grofs and unwholfome, as in the Southern Parts of Naples, feveral Months in the Summer being feorching hot; the Soil is fruitful, the Trees for the moft part continually green; here is found great Quantity of Alabafter, and of the pureft Marble.

The Country is fo ftately, that I cannot omit mentioning the following Epithets applied to feveral Cities of Italy, viz. Roma la Santa, Napoli la Nobile, Forenza la bella, Venetia la Ricca, Genua la Superba, Milano la Grande; Ravenna l'antiqua, Padua la Dotta, Bolonia la Graffa, Ligorna la Mercante, Verona la Formofa, Luca la Graciofa, and Cafale la forte.

There

There are 70 Cardinals, and two thirds of the Conclave muft be for the Pope before he is chofen: there are 40 Archbishops, and 258 Bishopricks. Paul the 4th used to brag he had 288000 Parishes, and 44000 Monafleries under his Jurisdiction. None but Jews are tolerated in Rome for the publick Excreife of their Religion; there is a weekly Sermon for their Conversion, at which one of each Family is bound to be prefent.

Naples is a very large and fair City, the Capital of a Kingdom ; few Cities in Europe have more Churches than this: The Viceroy's Palace is fumptuous, the Mole is an admirable Piece, it runs a quarter of a Mile iq-to the Sea, with a ftately Pharos or Lighthouse at the End of it, where there is a Fountain of fresh Water. In this City there are two Univerfities and four ftrong Caffles or Citadels; it is not above half as big as London or Paris, but more beautiful than either: In the Neighbourhood of this City there is a little Hill called Paufilypus, pleafantly fi-tuated on the Coaft four Miles and a half from it; the Alcent to it is fomewhat difficult, upon which Account a Paffage has been dug up to it through the Mountain, which is call'd the Cave of Puzzoli ; it is almoft a Mile long, between 30 and 40 Foot high, and 12 broad, in fome Places cut through Rocks, and in others through Sand, it has no Light but at both Ends, and by a Hole in the Middle over an Oratory made in the Rock, wherein is a Lamp continually burning burning for the Benefit of Passengers; the Mountain is very pleafant, adorn'd with Gentlemens Houses of Pleafure ; it produces excellent Wine, and runs out into the Sea like a Promontory. At the Entrance of this Cave stands the famous Tomb of Virgil, which at prefent is a ruinous Pyramid; his Urn and Infeription are not to be feen now. A little beyond this Mountain is the Grotto del Cane, which fends fuch a thin and piercing Exhalation without Smoke, that feizes ones Breath, and choaks any living Creature in a Moment: It is 9 or 10 Foot long, and 4 and a half broad, and 5 high; the Experiment has been tried on condemned Criminals, and frequently on Dogs (from whence it has its Name) but being immediately pull'd out by Rope, and thrown into a Lake that is 20 Paces diftant from it, they recover again in ^a Moment. There is another Cave which puts one prefently into a Sweat, and is a prefent Remedy against the Gout, and inward Ulecrs; it purges noxious Humours, and reftores natural Vigour. About 8 Miles South-East from the City is the famous Mount Vesuvins, or Monte di Somma, which throws out Fire, Smoke, Sulphur, Stones and Heaps of burnt Earth, which proceeds, I suppose, from the vast Quantity of Bitumen, Allom, &c, under Ground along the Coaft ; and as the Water increases, the Mountain makes Eruptions more or lefs formidable; it stands, near the Shore in a fruitful Plain; the Ashes and Earth it throws our makes the neighbouring Plains very fertile. The

The first four Miles along the Coast from Naples abounds with Villages, and is a well manur'd Country, but the rest is fill'd with loose Stones, and Heaps of burnt Earth thrown out by the Mountain. Upon the South-East of Vesuvius there are Vines which produce the noble Wine called Lachryma Christi.

Charybdis and Seylla is a Conflict of Waves in the Straits of Sicily, fome rifing up, and others falling down with fo great a Noife that it's terrible, not only to those that are near it, but also to those that are at a Diftance; the Conflict is most violent between Charybdis and Seylla (which are about five Miles diftant) in fuch a Manner, that if there be any Ships in it at that Time, they certainly are dash'd against the Rocks; and if they escape, and don't observe the Current off from Scylla, they are earried to Charybdis, which makes good these Verses;

Antra Charybdis adit qui vult evadere Scyllam, Incidit in Scyllam qui vult vitare Charybdin.

Sicily is the greateft Island in the Mediterranean: It was formerly called Trinacria, becaufe of its Triangular Form: It is govern'd by a Viceroy from the King of Spain, who is chang'd every three Years, or continued, according to the King's Pleafure. The Revenue is about 4000000 Crowns a Year. The Air is healthful, and the Soil fo fruitful, that it is counted the Store-houfe of Italy;

Italy; 'tis near 700 Miles in Circuit, and contains many fair and rich Towns, but it is much infefted by Mount Gibello, anciently call'd Ætna, of which I shall give no Account, being much of the same Nature as Mount Vesuvius, whereof we have given an Account in Naples.

The Women are handfom, but not extraordinary vertuous; the Men are of a tawny Complexion, witty and jealous; they wear always by their Side a Dagger two Hands long, and three Fingers hroad; there is hardly a Tradefman in his Shop without having one by his Side, even whilft he is at work; they are connted very revengeful, and much given to Theft; but the People of 'Quality are not fo much addicted to those Vices. The Maffacre of the French in this Island Anno 1270. call'd the Sicilian Vespers, is very memorable in History.

, Malta did formerly belong to the Kingdom of Sicily, and is counted an European Island, though it is nearer the Continent of Africa. The Emperor Charles the 5th gave It in Fee to the Knights of St. John of feru-Salem in the Year 1530. after they had loft the Isle of Rhodes, which Solyman the Magnificent took Anno 1522. They were formerly call'd The Knights of Rhodes, and now of Mal-¹a. This Order is divided into three States, viz. Knights, Chaplains, and Servants at Arms : The Knights are to be Noble by four Degrees on each Side ; the Chaplains Noble, or at least of a confiderable Family, as alfo the Servants. The

The Government is both Monarchical and Aristocratical : The great Master is cholen by the Knights, and reprefents a Monarch, coins Money, grants Pardons, confers Benefices, and has the Title of Eminence. Their Aristocracy confists in what they call the Sacred Council, where the Grand Mafter has only two Votes, and can determine nothing without the Advice of this Council, which confilts of the great Croffes, two of the oldeft Knights of each of the feven Nations of which they are compos'd, viz. Provences Auvergne, France, Italy, Arragon, Germany and Caftile : Great Britain formerly made the 8th, but ceas'd fince the Reformation. The Great Master La Valette laid the first Stone of the City of Valetta, a Place excellently well fortified, fituate on a Languet or Tongue of a Rock, having a good Haven on each Side the Town takes up the Breadth of the faid Languet, and reaches from one Haven to another. There are feveral Noble Buildings, among the reft the Palace of the Great Mafter, which is very flately, wherein there is a confiderable Magazine of Arms: I was alfured there was enough to arm 40000 Men-The Palaces of the Confervatory and Treafury, likewife the Hofpitals and Inns or Alberges for the Knights, are very magnificent; the Hall for the fick Knights is hung with rich Tapestry, where they are attended by Knights, and ferv'd in Plate. All fick Perfons are receiv'd and well treated in this Hofpital, nor are poor travellers refus'd, for chey they are here provided both with Bed and Board, till they find Paffage for the Place whither they are bound, then they are furnifh'd with Provisions, and all their Charges are born during their Voyage. The Barrack is a very curious Place, cover'd with lovely Trees planted in Rows; the high Garden, that looks into the Port below the Baftion of Italy, is very pleafant, full of Rows of Orange and Lemon Trees, and adorn'd with many Fountains and Wa-ter-works playing very high, which render the Place extreme delightful. There is a Fountain upon the Port very ornamental, there being a Dolphin under the Feet of a Neptune, which throws up Water to a great Height, fo commodioufly plac'd, that Ships can take in fresh Water, without putting their Casks afhore. Near the great Portal there are eight Chapels, besides that of St. John there is another where all the great Masters are buried, and many Reliqueskept, among which there is the Right Hand of St. John the Baptist, wanting the two leffer Fingers.

The old Town, formerly call'd Melita, now Citta Notabile, was very large and po-Pulous in ancient Times, but now confifts only of 565 Houfes, and about 2620 Souls. The Great Mafter has a Palace here, built like a Caftle, with fine Gardens, Orchards and Water-works. There are 30 or 40 large Villages in the whole Ifland, 26 Parifh Churches, and 25000 Men can be rais'd in it. K

From Rome to Baccano Borgo are counted 15 Miles, the way being very good, but we fmel't an extraordinary filthy Stink of Brimftone for the Space of about two Miles; we were troubled with the fame Sort of Smell for two Miles more of our way to Viterbo, which is ten Miles diftant from the abovemention'd Town: It is a pretty large City, at the Entrance whereof there is a fine Fountain with curious Spouts of feveral Sorts, and at the other Gate going out, we faw another Fountain like unto it.

From hence to Montefiascone we travell'd 8 Miles ; a Town feated on the Top of a Mountain over the Lake of Volfeno Northweft of Viterbo; it is famous for its excellent Muscatello Wine. In the Church of St. Flavian near the Town is a remarkable Infeription on the Tomb of a German Abbot of Bishop, who travelling to Rome, used always to fend his Servant before him to know in what Inn was the beft Wine, and order'd him to write over the Door with Chalk the Latin Word [Eff]. The Servant finding the Wine extraordinary Good, writ three Times Eft upon the Door: The Mafter lik'd the Wine fo well, and drank to that Excels of it, that he died upon the Spot; whereupon his Servant order d the following. Lines to be writ.

Fft, Eft, Eft, propter nimium Eft, Johannes, de Fac Dominus meius mertuus oft.

From

From thence to Laurenzo de Grotta are 13 Miles, the Road being pretty good, partby indifferent; we left Bouline 5 Miles off: About this Place we enter'd into the Dutchy of Tufcany, and almost in every Village hereabouts they ask'd us for the Dogana, that is, zcertain fuppos'd Right due to the Duke, but We paid none here.

Radicafoni is 18 Miles diftant from this Place; it is feated in the Mountains, the way to it is very good, but fleep; we pafs'd from hence through Scala, and after travelling 13 Miles, we arriv'd at Bon convento, the way being the fame; thence to Luciniano 7 Miles, from whence to

Siena are 8 Miles of very good way ; it is feated both upon high and low Ground, which makes it fomewhat incommodious; but it has a good Air, the Streets are neatly Pav'd with Brick laid fide-ways; the Houfes are handfom, and the Water excellent. In this Town the Tuscan Language is taught and spoke in Perfection, and it is much fre-Quented by Strangers upon that Account. The Cathedral is a compleat Structure fac'd with Marble both without and within, and of excellent Architecture. The Vault is of. Azure Colour besprinkled with Stars, and a Breat Part of the Pavement of Mefaick Work, representing several Histories of the Old Testament; at the Entrance of it there is writ in the Pavement, Castifimum Virginis Templum, caste memeno ingredi.

The

The great Hospital, the Convent of the Dominicans, the Cordeliers, the Palaces and Fountains are very magnificent. In the great Church there are the Images of all the Sibyls, with their Characters and Prophecies, and a Series of Popes. The Citadel is built on a high Hill with 18 or 20 Towers in fquare for the Defence of the City: Here is a famous Place, in Fashion of a Shell, which can be cassify fill'd with Water from its Fountains to represent the Naval Fights, as the Romans us'd to do in their Arena's; the Houses round it are all uniform with Piazza's under them to cover the People from Sun and Rain; it is 20 Miles from Florence.

From hence we travell'd 12 Miles to Pongiboni, to Sambra 3 Miles, the Road being very good between little fine Collins; thence to Camiano 10 Miles, to Salpontodera 18, through charming Fields, the way all along being very good.

After we had advanc'd 12 Miles further, we arriv'd at Pifa, through a very good Road, and a pleafant Country; it ftands in a Plain on the River Arno, over which it has three Bridges, being 15 Miles North from Legborn, and 10 South-Eaft from Lucca. The City is large, the Streets broad, ftraight, and neatly pav'd with large Stones, the Houfes generally well built, but very ill peopled. Their Metropolitan Church is very ftately, and its Brazen Gates magnificent, and noted for the Hiftory of our Redemption curioufly e n bofs'd upon them, they are four in Number.

The Baptistery is 180 Foot round; the Chuch 540 Paces in Circuit, supported by 70 Pillars; it is all lin'd with Marble, beautified with flarely Altars and curious Paintings; the Walls are hung with Red Velvet, and the Roof richly gilt: Near the Church there is a Steeple in the Form of a Cylinder, to which they afcend by 153 Steps; it inclines 15 Foot on one fide, some ascribe it to Art, others to the finking of the Foundation, Near ir lies the Campo Santo, or the Buryingplace fill'd with Earth brought from Jerufalem, which, they fay, confumes the Corps in 48 Hours; it has a broad Portico well Painted and pav'd with Grave-ftones. At the South-fide of the Dome there is the little Chutch of St. John, in form round, the Building is magnificent on the out-fide, but very indifferent within. There is an Aqueduct that conveys Water by 5000 Arches into the City from Hills that are 5 Miles di-ftant from it, 'tis counted fo good, that it is carried in Flasks to Florence. We faw the Cudgel-fighting on the Bridge, which was perform'd in very good Order, and was mighty diverting, at which all the Court was present.

Leghorn is 15 Miles South from Pifa, the Road is very pleafant, and for the moft part through a fine Park belonging to the Grand Duke, very well flock'd with Deer; the Ttees yield a vaft Revenue by Reafon of the Prodigious Quantity of Cork taken from them. The City is encompaffed with ftrong K 2 and

and handfom Fortifications, lin'd with Brick, the Houses are all of an equal Height, for the most part painted on the out-fide; the Streets are large and streight, in it there are 5000 Jews; in the middle of the City there is a large Piazza, where we faw the pleafant Sport of Foot-ball, all the Place being furrounded with Scaffolds for the Spectators. The Canal for Commerce hence to Pifa, is of great Service, Boats of great Burthen coming and going thereon perpetually; it is 14 Miles long, and having drain'd the neighbouring Marshes, has rendred the Air (which heretofore was very unwholfome) much better. Within the great Harbour there is a leffer one for the Gallies; the fift is fecur'd by a Mole, and has a Lanthorn with feven Lights. The other remarkable Things are the Statue of Duke Ferdinand the First, in Marble, with four Slaves in Brass at his Feet; the Greek Church, the Castle, the Jews Synagogue, and the Gun-powder Tower in the Sea. From hence to Lucca they count to Miles, half the way being very good, but in the middle there is a fteep Hill, being a Mile of difficult afcent and fo much of descent on the other fide. The City lies in a pleafant and fruitful Plain near the River Serchio, incompassed with rich and well inhabited Hills ; it is both fine and populous, adorn'd with ftately Churches and Palaces: The Fortifications are regular and well lin'd, having 12 Baftions. The molt remarkable Thing is the Palace of the Re-Publick publick, where the Gonfalonier or Standard Bearer refides with his nine Counfellors; he assumes the Title of a Prince, but they call him only His Excellency; he is chang'd every two Months, and has 240 Nobles under him, who are divided into two Parts, and Sovern by Turns for half a Year each Part; he has no other Advantage by his Dignity, but his Table maintain'd at the publick Charge, and after fix Years he may be chofen again. The Arfenal is confiderable, and kept in good Order. In the Cathedral is the famous Crucifix which the Legendaries Pretend was finish'd by an Angel after that Nicodemus had attempted it in vain : The Windows of the Church are very curious. This City is under the Emperor's Protection Many of the Inhabitants retir'd to Geneva after the Reformation.

From hence we travell'd 10 Miles of bad way to Pitoia ; the Town is very large, furrounded with Walls only, without Fortifi-eations, poorly inhabited, neither is there any Thing remarkable in it. Here hence to

Florence are 20 Miles, the way being very good in Summer, but indifferent in Winter: The Country is very fine and fruitful, there being abundance of Country-Seats on each Side of the Road. It lies on the River Arno, which falls into the Mediterranean 35 Miles below it : It stands, as it were, in the Bottom of an Amphitheater at the Beginning of ^a Plain which opens towards the Weft, and is bounded on , all Sides by a great Number of

of charming Hills, which rife infenfibly to the higheft Mountains of the Appennin, interfpers'd with fine Villages, Noblemens Seats, Gardens, Groves and little Woods of Olive-Trees; fo that no City in the World deferves more the Name of Beautiful than Florence. It is about 6 or 7 Miles in Compafs, containing about 8800 Houfes, 22 Hofpitals, 89 Convents, 84 Fraternities, 152 Churches, 18 Halls belonging to Merchants, 72 Courts of Juftice, 17 Palaces, 4 Bridges, 7 publick Fountains, 6 Columns, 2 Pyramids, and 160 publick Statues.

The Streets are nearly pav'd with Grey Stones, the Palaces are counted the nearest in Italy. The ordinary Revenue of the Great Duke (who is of the Family of Medicis) 15 counted to amount to 2000000 Crowns, and he is faid to have in his Treafury 20000000 of Gold Pieces, belides Jewels and other Things of great Value; and is fo powerful, that he can eafily raife 40000 Foot, and 3000 Horfe, and put to Sea 12 Gallies, 2 Galleaffes, and 20 Men of War: His Palace call'd Pini, is very magnificent, at the great Gate of it there is a Load-ftone faid to weigh 5000 Pounds. Several of the Galleries and other Rooms are fill'd with ancient and modern Curiofities, particularly the Octogonal-Room, call'd the Tribune, 24 Foot in Diameter, and cover'd with an arch'd-Dome, the infide whereof is overlaid with Mother of Pearl, the Walls hung with Velvet, beautified with a vast Number of rare Orna-

Ornaments, the Windows of Cryftal, and the Floor pav'd with Marble of feveral Colours curioufly join'd together; this Room, I fay, is full of the molt precious Things of Europe. Here are kept the Famous Diamond of Florence, valued at 150000 Crowns; an ancient Head of Julius Cæsar, one intire Turky-Stone as big as an Egg, a Cupboard full of Veffels of Agat, Lapis Lazuli, &cc. a large Table and Cabinet of Oriental Jafper, with a vaft Collection of precious Stones admirably well wrought; a wonderful Collection of rare Medals, and a prodigious Number of ancient Pieces of carved and engraved Work, with the choiceft Pictures and Statues.

The Gallery of the old Palace is a flately Building adorn'd with the Pictures and Statues of the Duke's own Family, and of the greateft Princes in Europe. The Armoury is full of Foreign Armors of great Value, and among others a Fowling-Piece with a Gold Barrel, valued at 1500 Piffols ; a Piftol of five Barrels fo fhort, that it can be put into a Hat, and difcharg'd at an Enemy under pretence of faluting him ; another of 18 Barrels for the Defence of a Room, with other Curiofities of the like Nature : Adjoining to this there are five Cabinets full of Curiofitics, viz Precious Stones valued at 200000 Crowns, Medals at 500000, an Ebony Cabinet fet with Precious Stones, refembling Birds and Flowers in their natural Colours, It being the Work of 30 Men for 15 Years.

In

In the Argentaria there are 12 large Cup boards fill'd with Services for a Table of Gold and Silver Plate, adorn'd with Precious Stones. The Duke's Gardens are extraordinary curious. There are three Caffles for the Defence of the City; that on the South-fide has Arms for 30000 Men. The Churches are of an excellent Structure ; the Cathedral of St. Maria Florida is one of the most exquisite Pieces of the World, especially for the Pillars that Support the Nave, which are so slender, and are at fuch a Diftance from one another, that they do not hinder the Sight of the Ifles, or the Prospect of the Church all at once; the Cupola excells all those of Italy (except that of St. Peters in Rome) in Compass and Height. The Church of St. Laurence contains the Tombé of the Duke's Family, and is remarkable for its Chapel, which, when finish'd, will be one of the richeft, and moft magnificent Structures in the World of its Size; the infide is coverd and inlaid with Jafper, Agat, Lapis Lazuli, Touch frone of feveral Colours, and various Figures, which make a glorious Appearance ; they have been already about 80 Years at work upon it, the Form is Octogone, the Roof a spacious Cupola, and in the Sides there are Niches for the Statues of the Grand Dukes, feveral of which are plac'd there already.

The Inhabitants are counted to be about 900000 in Number. The Elorentines are counte ed witty, brave, and frugal, but ridiculoully jealous. We have given and received Visits from the famous and learned Magliabecchi, a right Philosopher. Leaving

Leaving Florence we came to Scarpena, which is 15 Miles from it; the way is very good, though among the Mountains; to Fiorenzola is a very fleep way, and to Loyan 14 Miles indifferent good, through the Mountains, both Sides are full of Chefnut-Trees. From thence to Bolonia arc counted 16 Miles, half the way we went through the Mountains, but the reft is very pleafant; it is the fecond Town of the Ecclefiaffical State, and one of the largest, best Peopled, and fineft in Italy; it has an Archbishop, who bears the Title of Prince of the Empire; it is about 27 Miles South-weft from Ferrara, and 16 South-east from Modena; here are feveral magnificent Churches, the greateft of which is that of St. Petronius, in the Pavement of which is represented Callinian's Meridional Line 220 Foot long, drawn in Copper ; it will be one of the fineft Churches in Europe, when finish'd. The Senate house alfo is as large and neat as any. Here are many fine Palaces, private Houfes, and a great Number of Towers, whereof that of Afmelli is as high as any in Europe. The Houles are for the most part of Stone and Brick plaister'd over; the Streets are pretty freight, and have Piazza's on each fide to fhelter the People from the Rigour of all Seafons. One of the Towers inclines 9 Foot on one Side : This City lies at the Foot of the Appennin Hills, which on the South-fide are cover'd with Vines, Olive, Fig, and lother Fruit-trees of all Sorts; on the other Side there are Fields abounding with Corn, Flax, Or. and fine Rows of Mul-

Mulberry trees, which nourilh a Multitude of Silk-worms.

This City is fo large, that it gave a convenient Entertainment to the Emperor Charles the 5th, with all the Princes and Ambasfadors that attended him, with the Pope and 15 Cardinals, when the faid Emperor was crown'd there in the Year 1529. fcarce any City in Europe could have entertain'd fuch a Multitude of Perfons of the higheft Rank, with their Attendants and Guards. When they fubmitted to the Pope, they articled, that they fhould never be curb'd with a Citadel, nor have their Effates confifcated on any Pretext whatfocver.

Padua is about 20 Miles from Venice, being the Bulwark of the Venetians on the Continent, hither we came from Venice along the Brento through a very pleafant and fruitful Champain Country, full of Noble Venetians Country" Houfes : It is defended by ftrong double Walls, the old ones, call'd Antenor's, are still to be feen; it is about 8 Miles in Circuit, but has a great deal of wafte Ground and empty Houfes; most of the Streets have Piazza's, which shelter the People from Rain and Sun, yet make the Streets narrow and dark. The molt remarkable Structure is the Town-hall, 250 Foor long, and 86 broad ; they alcend to it by many Steps, and there are Shops under it. The Univerfity is famous particularly for the Study of Phyfick, which occasion'd Padua to be cal-led the Learned. The Students are very nume-rous, they us'd to commit feveral Murthers, Rob.

Robberies and Diforders in the Piazza's at Night, and frequently after their (qui wali) they fire at a Man if he ftands, and if he runs he meets with another qui wali; but this is reform'd of late. The Ponte molino has 30 Mills together on the River Brent. The Cathedral of St. Sopbia has 100000 Crowns Revenue per Annum left by the Empress Berta, Wise to the Emperor Henry the 4th, who has a Monument here.

St. Anthony's Church is a rich and noble Structure adorn'd with rare Pictures, emboss'd Works, Statues and the Sepulcher of that Saint, in great Veneration over all that Country, and famous for the Pilgrims that come to visit his Reliques : I had the Patience of feeing thefe poor ignorant Creatures beflow many Killes upon the cold Marble, wherein the suppos'd Body lies; there were in le's than four Mi-nutes 50 of them, fome of them return'd after they went out, and kifs'd again, having, as I uppofe, omitted fome Ceremony or Duty. They were building a new Chapel dedicated to the Tongue of this Saiot, in the Church. The Chapel of St. Anthony has a rich and noble Roof fultained by 12 Marble Pillars, with a Legend of his Miracles betwixt them; the Church has 6 Cupola's on the Roof, supported by excellent Marble Pillars, and covered with Lead.

The Church of Sancta Justina is also a very fine Building, join'd to the Convent of the Augustins, the Pavement thereof is very curious. In the great Hall wherein Titus Livius's Sepul-

Sepulcher is, we faw a large Marble Stone, on which, if any Perfon will fit Bare-ars'd, having two Witneffes with him, he is by cuftom freed from all his Debts. The Church and Convent of the Black Fryers may be compar'd with any in Europe. The Ruins of their ancient Amphitheater is one of the nobleft, and moft remarkable Monuments of Antiquity now extant, and hardly to be match'd in the whole World. There is a very pleafant Profpect from the Walls of the City into a plain Country adjacent, referv'd for Corn only; neither are there any Trees permitted to be planted within feveral Miles of the Walls.

There is between this Place and Venice a fine CataraSta nr Sluice built by order of the Senate of Venice feveral Years ago in the River Brent, which falls into the Adriatick 4 Miles from Venice; for the Courfe of that River being unequal by reafon of its different Depth, they had Recourfe to Art for the more commodious Paffage of Veffels; fo that in three of four Places on the River they order'd Machines a crofs it (e'pecially at a Village call'd Il Dela, and La Mira) into which the River Flowings might he intercepted for fome Time, fo as to fwell, and then it is let out at the other End, that Veffels may be more commodioufly convey'd to Venice.

Modena lies in a pleafant fruitful Plain on 2 Canal betwixt the Panaro and Secobia; it is the Refidence of the Duke, and is neither rich nor populous: The only Structure of Note is the new Palace very neat within, nicely gilt and and painted, adorn'd with good Hangings, and Pictures by the beft Mafters. The Duke has also a noble Cabinet of Curiofities, and Stables furnish'd with the fines Horfes; he is of the noble Family of E fe, from which the Families of Brunswick, Lunenburg, and Baden are defeended. The Streets of the Town have Piazza's, ill kept, on each Side: The Citadel is pretty flrong on a Level with the Town, but the other Fortifications are neglected: The Steeple of the Cathedral is difcover'd at a great Diftance, and has a mighty noble Prospect.

Mantua is the Refidence of its Duke, and ftands upon a Lake 21 MilesSouth of Verona, and South by Eaft of Milan, the Lake is form'd by the River Mineio, and being encompaß'd with it, is effeem'd one of the ftrongeft Towns by Nature in Italy: The Fortifications added by Art, is only an ordinary Wall and a Citadel. The City is large, and has many handfome broad Streets well built, and feveral Piazza's with Marhle Pillars round them. Here are many fine Palaces of Noblemen, and about 600 Coaches are feen in the City: The Duke's great Palace contains $\varsigma \varsigma \circ$ Rooms, and is capable to lodge five Princes with their Retinue, befides the Duke himfelf. The Hall of Antiquity is full of Rarities; the Stables remarkable for the Architecture, and Number of fine Horfes kept in them.

Befides thefe the Duke has feven nr eight Country Seats, all very lovely; the Palazzo del The is at a fmall Distance from one of the-Gates of the City, well worth feeing; its Hall is curioufly painted with the Hiffory of the Giants florming Heaven, and fo artificially roofed and vaulted, that is makes a double whifpering Place, where at the oppofite Corners of the Room every little Sigh or Whifper is diffinctly heard, and in no other Place; neither can he that flands hetween hear any Thing of it. I have feen Whifpering-places in Padua, Montpelier, and elfewhere, but thole were but fingle ones, but this exceeds them all being contriv'd with a double Crofs. Arch, and made a large double crofs-whifpering Place. The Air is reekon'd unhealthy, and very infectious in the great Heats of Summer, by reafon of the flagnating Waters.

Trent lies in a pleafant Valley, encompated with high, and almost unpassable Hills, fo that there is fcarce any coming at it, but from Ve rong on the South, and from Tirol on the North: 'Tis fubject to its own Bilhop, who is Vaffal to the Emperor, who as Count of Tirch has the Superiority of this Bishoprick. The Town is molt remarkable for its Antiquity; it is pretty populous, though not very large, and is defended by an old Castle. Here are many flately Palaces, and feveral beautiful Churches. The Cathedral is a fine Piece of Architecture with Marble Pillars of extraordi nary height and thickness. The Church of St. Mary Major is noted for the Council of Trent being held in it, and the Hiftory of that Council is finely painted on one fide of the Wall, of which they boaft very much. In this Chutch there is a most remarkable Organy which which counterfeits all Sorts of Inftruments, and the Singing of Birds fo naturally, that it is hard to diffinguish it from the real; it likewise imitates the Cries of feveral Beafts, and the Beating of Drums. In the Cathedral they have a Crucifix as hig as the Life which the fabulous Priefts affirm to have bowed its Head in Tnken of its Approbation of the Decrees of the Council, when they were proclaim'd under it. They add, That this Crucifix was made without Hands, and that no Body knows what Materials it is compos'd of. The Council was open'd January the 14th 1554. and continued till 1563. during which Time there are faid to have been here no less than 4000 Perlons of a publick Character, with their Artendants, among which there were 13 Cardihals Legates, 9 that were not Legates, 29 Minifters from Princes, 3 Patriarchs, 33 Archbilhops, 233 Bilhops, 18 Abbots, 12 Generals of Orders, 148 Doctors of Divinity, 18 Pro-Ctors or Deputies, 3 Officials of the Council, ⁹ Canters, 4 Notaries, and 2 Couriers from the Pope; who were all well accommodated in this City. This Council was procur'd by sodly Men to require the Church that began to be divided, or rather to reform the Abules of the Popes and Court of Rome that were the Occasion of the Separation ; but the Pope's Authority was fuch, that inftead of a true Birth the Council was deliver'd of a Monfter; inflead of a Synodical Decree, had brought forth a Papal Bull; in Lieu of an Estimation of A. bules and Errors, fet up a Nuclery for both; T. Depra-

Depravation, and a Source of Injuffice, inflead of Reformation. On the Front of the Choit of the Cathedral there is a Latin Infeription giving an Account of the Council, and of the Perfons above-mention'd.

They have in St. Peter's Church a Chappel for St. Simonin a Shoe-maker's Son, who in the 28th Month of his Age was ftolen and murther'd by the fews, who drank his Blood at one of their Feafts, and threw his Carcafs into a Water pipe where their Synagogue ftoodbut was after wards found by Filhermen, whereupon the Murther was difcover'd, 39 fews executed, and the reft for ever banilh'd the City. Pope Sixtus the 4th canoniz'd this Child, whofe Body being embalm'd, is kept in a Cafe on the Altar of this Chapel, with the Knife, Pincers and Silver Goblets in which they drank his Blood.

The City flands on a flat Rock of a kind of reddifh and white Marble; it is fubject to dan gerous Inundations from the overflowing of the River, and fome neighbouring Brooks which fall down from the Mountains with fuch Impetuofity, that they roll great Rocks into the Town. In Summer the Rays of the Sun reflecting on the Flint Rocks that encompafs it, make the Heat almost intolerable, as the Cold is in Winter; hut in Spring and Autumn the Air is wholfom and remperate. They have Plenty of Oil, Wine, and Fruit in their Fields, but little Corn; the Wine is well tafted, ftrong, and of a pale Colour.

The Inhabitants being on the Borders of Germany and Italy, speak both High Dutch and Italian very well: They are reproach'd with the Character of Germanorum Sentina, and Italorum Refugium, as if it were a Place of Rendezvous of the worst Sort of People of both Countries: But when I was there I observ'd they were very civil, and mighty obliging to us; they are reckon'd by others very faithful to their Promises, and tender of doing any thing inconfistent with Humanity and Friendship. The Way out of Italy into Germany, fee after Verona, which is a very ancient City 37 Miles from Venice, pleafantly feated upon the River Adige that runs through it, divided by it into two Parts, which have Communication by four flately Bridges of Stone: It has a very pleafant Prospect from the Heights, and is commanded by two Calles, hut the rest of the Fortifications are irregular and neglected. The Adige forms an Island in the middle, which is best inhabited. The Streets are narrow and ill kept, the Houfes low and unequal, their Balconies loaded with Boxes and Pots of Flowers, that it feems dangerous for one to walk under them. The most remarkable Monumeor of Antiquity is the Amphitheater about the middle of the Town; it has 72 Gates with as many Arches and Columns, and was adorn'd with 144 vaft Statues, and as many Rows of Pillars, Arches and Windows of the Doric, Ionic, Corinthian and Composite Order; it is still capable of containing 24000 Perfons very conveniently, and us'd for Fights of Beafts.

The

The Cabinet of Count Mascardo in this City, is worthy a Travellers View, being well stock d with rare Pictures, Books, Animals, Plants, monstrous Productions of Nature, Utenfils us'd in Pagan Sacrifices, 5000 Medals of all Sotts, great Variety of Coins, (whereof fome are of Leather) and a vast Collection of Shells, Urns, Lamps, &c.

This City is govern'd by a Podesta from Venice, with Magiltrates under him, and 3 Courcils, one of 12, another of 50, and the third of 72 Men.

The Way from Trent to Germany is through Tirol to Navis 5 Miles, a little Village, to Newmark 15 along the Adige, to Bolfano 15, in a little Valley full of Vines, and abundance of Houfes, to Celman 15 along the Eilock, full of Country-houfes, to Brixen 15, a little walld Town, it is a Bilhoprick and a Soveraignty, the Bilhop whereof refides in it; to Maulls 15, to Streezengen 5, to Priner 10, to Meutray 10, all the Way being very good and pleafant, only from Brixen hither. To Infpruck there are 15 Miles always going down the Mountain-Here we mult lhow our Paffports, and give half a Florin : We took our Horles from the Calalh, and let the Calafh roll down upon the Frofty Way.

Infpruck (whereof we have made mention already) is a pretty large Town, well built, but has neither Walls nor Fortifications about it The River Inn (from which it has its Name, as it were, Inns bridge, Bruck fignifying the fame in High Dutch as Bridge in English) runs through it

It; and being very broad the Frontifpiece of the Houfes makes a delightful Profpect on each fide. The Francifcans Church has nothing remarkable, but the great Number of large Statues of Brafs therein. From hence to Seefield are 15 Miles, half the Way being good, but the reft bad; to Mittenwalt 2 Miles and a half German; about an Italian Mile before we came to the Village, we faw a Fortrefs between two Mountains, which feparate Bavaria from Tirol, it has been formerly very ferviceable to the Elector of that Name; for it is foutified on the fide of Tirol, and fince the late Revolution in that Country, the Emperor caus'd it to be pretty well fortified on the fide of Bavaria alfo, there being already 2 Baffions with their Dirches, Draw bridges, feveral Ravelins, and Half-moons, upon the left fide coming from Tirol, as regular as the Mountainous Ground wou'd permit. From hence to Partenkirk are 2 Miles and a half very bad Way through Mountains and narrow Paffes, which is mighty redious, being forc'd to have either our Calalhes, or those of the Perfons We met, drawn back. To Baifoya 2 Miles, to Paitingen 2, the Way bad, and very uneafic through narrow faffes up and down ; to Tenklingen 2 Miles of good Way; the Inhabitants are neat, and we were well accommodated : To Overlack 3 Miles, the Way good, but dirty; to Augsburg 3 Miles, the Road being very. good and pleafant through a large Plain aslong as possible we could fee. Of Augsburg we have already spoken, now we will return into Italy again. Cre-L 3

Cremona on the North fide of the Po, is diftant 45 Miles South Eaft from Milan ; there is a Canal from the River that runs through the City, fills its Ditches, and forms a Communication between this River and the Oglio. The City is large, but not very rich or populous; it belongs to the Spaniards. Here is a great Number of fine Structures, particularly the Cathedral, which has a noble Portico fupported by many fine Marble Pillars; the Bifhop's Palace, the Town-houfe, and the Palace of the Podefta, are worth feeing. The Streets are freight and large, the Houfes well built, the Air very good, and the Situation very agreeable, in a plealant Plain. It is famous for the noble Attempt of Prince Eugene of Savey, who furpriz'd it by Night in February 1702. but not being supported by his Troops, who millook their Way, and being out numbered by the Garrison, was oblig'd to quit it, but carried away Prisoner Marcfchal de Villeroy, who was their General.

Parma is 26 Miles diftant South East from Gremona, and 72 from Milan; it is a larger populous, pleafant, rich and well fortified Cityr being in Circuit about 3 Miles; the Situation airy, the Houfes low, but very neat, the Streets large and streight; many of the Palaces very fumptuous. There are 3 Bridges between the City and the Suburbs all well fortified. The Duke's Palace is noble, especially that Part of it that was lately built, the Furnirure and Painting very fine; the Gardens, Grotto's and Water-works curious; the Churches ches are flarely, the Citadel is very flrong built after the Model of that of Antwerp; the great Theater of the Playhoufe exceeds those of Paris and Venice, being fo contriv'd, that the leaft Whifper may be heard through the whole; it has no Boxes but Benches rais'd in Form of an Amphitheater, and they can fill the Pir with Water three Foot deep, on which they place little gilt Boats, that fill'd with Illuminations form a very pleasing Spectacle. There is a large College call'd that of the Nobles, where the Sciences and all Manner of Exercises are taught; in it Scholars of all Nations may take their Trials for the Order of Malta.

Their Academy of Wits is call'd Innovati, becaufe they would rather be Learned than accounted fo: Here is a great Concourfe of handfom Women, and others of Quality to be feen at the Court, and in the Walks, but they will not allow the Men and Women to be in the fame Coach.

Plaifance is 32 Miles from Parma, an ancient City, 5 Miles in Compafs, it has many flately Houfes and Squares, the chief is that where the Brafs Statues of Alexander Prince of Parma, and his Son Ranuccio fland. There are noble Fountains, large, and well pav'd Streets, an ancient Caffle of Briek, and a ftrong Citadel. It is but ill inhabited, the Penple are very eivil. The Cathedral is an old Structure, but well adorn'd within. The City is very pleafantly feated in a fertile Plain. The Money differs here from that of Parma, though under the L A fame Prince, which occasions trouble and Loss to Travellers.

Cafal, about 23 Miles from Turin, and 15 North-Weft from Alexandria, lies in a pleafant Plain on the Po; it was reekon'd one of the beft fortified Places in Europe, till the Year 1696 when it was befieg'd by the Duke of Savoy and defended by the French (in whofe Poffet fion it was) but by Articles agreed upon between both, 'twas furrender'd to the Duke of Mantur, the Citadel and Fortifications being first demolified; the ill Air, and frequent Revolutions thereof makes it but thinly inhabited.

' Milan is one of the largest Cities in Europe, being 10 Miles in Circuit, feated in a pleafant Plain, and is counted one of the moft magnificent, populous, trading Cities in Italy. One wou'd hardly think that it was befieg'd forty Times, taken two and twenty, rein'd three or four Times, particularly in 1162. by the Emperor Frederick the Fiflt, who ras'd and fow'd it with Salt, to revenge the Affront the Inhabitants put upon the Empress his Wife, by mounting her upon a Mule, with her Face to wards the Tail, which they made her take in her Hand instead of a Bridle, and carried her in that difgraceful manner through the City. It is of a round Form, and divided into fix Wards, which have their Names from fo many Gates. It has the Collegiate Churches, 71 Parilhes, 30 Colleges of Regular Monks, 8 of Regular Clerks, 36 of Nuns, 32 for Difei pline, and 120 Schools where Youth is inftructed 3 firucted in Religion. There are many People of Quality, who have fumptuous Palaces, and in general the Houfes are very flately, the Squares large and fine, the Streets broad and neat.

The Citadel is nf a regular Hexagon, well lortified and provided with Canon, and is the molt famous in Europe both for its Strength and Largeness, it being of so large an Extent, that It refembles a great Town with Streets, Allies, Market-places, and Shops of all Sorts : The Ditches are fill'd with Water, and fac'd with Brick on each fide, the Ramparts very ftrong and thick. The most remarkable Structures are the Cathedral, which is vality large, there is a Picture of St. Bartholomew flea'd alive, an extraordinary fine Piece, (for which the French King offer'd 500000 Crowns) as alfo 160 Marble Pillars valued at 10000 Crowns cach; the Ambrifian Library containing 14000 Ma. nufcripts, and 72000 printed Books; the Hofpital call'd Moor, confifting of 4 Galleries and a Square, containing 92 Chambers each, fo contriv'd, that the Sick may from their feveral Aparements fee the Ceremony of the Mafs perform'd at the Altar in the middle of the Square under a Dome supported with Columns. This Building is fo magnificent, that it might ferve the greatest Prince for his Palace. The Revenues of it are 50000 Crowns per Annum, the Number of Sick and Poor 4000.

The Clofet of Rarities of the late Canon Manfreda Settula, is worth a Traveller's feeing; among other Things there is a great Picce of Cloth Cloth made of Amianthus, call'd Salamanders Hair, which never burns in the Fire, but when foul is made clean by it. A Difh of yellow Amber a Foot in Diameter, and feveral rough Pieces of the fame, which inclose feveral Infects; an Olive-Leaf, and a Drop of Water which feems to move.

The Palace of the Archbishop (who must be a Cardinal) is very magnificent, as also the Town-house where the Senate meets. They have been at work about the Cathedral upwards of 300 Years, and are like to be many more; the Workmanschip of which is by some prefer'd to that of St. Peter's at Rome, though it be hy a fixth Part lessin its Size.

The chief Trade of the Town confifts in Lace, Embroideries of Gold and Silver, and in Works of Steel and Cryftal, at which they are very expert. They have an Academy of Wits call'd Nofcosti, or Hidden Men. A Native of this City was fo ftrong, that he could take a Horfe laden with Corn on his Back, and stop any Horfe at full Gallop. There was another that had fo excellent a natural Wit, that without the Help of Learning he could refore the niceft Question in Law as well as the ablest Lawyers.

The Inhabitants are very fond of Reliques, and pretend to have at the Church of St. Alexander 144000 Martyrs from the Catacombs of St. Sebastian.

The Women are fix to one more numerous than the Men, infomuch that in feveral Years after Milan came to be under the Spaniards, there there was not knnwn to be born any Male-Child in it. This City is 33 Miles distant from Cafal, and 14 from Pavia.

Carpi is feated in a fine Plain on a Canal of the Secchia, which fills the Ditches, and renders it very firong; it is about 10 Miles North. Welt from Modena, defended by good Fortifications and a Citadel. The Germans took it in 1702. after defeating the French in the Neighbourhood; it was retaken by the French the Year following, but they were fince oblig'd to guit it.

Pignerol is about 15 Miles from Turin, and 30 North-East from Ambrun; it was taken by the French under the Conduct of Cardinal Richelieu in the Year 1630, and fo well fortified, that it was reckon'd one of the ftrongest Fortreffes in Europe. The French King us'd it as a Prison for Criminals of State, and by Means of this Fortrefs, had one of the Keys of Italy in his Hand. The prelent Duke laid Siege to it in 1693, and blew up the Fortrels of St. Bridget, which had a Communication with the Citadel by a covert Way, and a Passage under Ground; but Monfieur Catinat advancing to its Relief with the French Army, the Duke was fore'd to raife the Siege; alter which a bloody Battle was fought, and a great Victory Bain'd by the French at Orbaffan in October 1693. it was afterwards reftor'd to the Duke, the Fortifications being first demolish'd.

Afti stands on the Tenaro about 27 Miles South East from Turin, a pretty large, populous and well built Town, defended by a Castle and a Citadel, divided into four Parts, vize the City, Burrough, Caftle and Citadel. The Territory round it is well water'd, abounding with Groves, pleafant Hills, fpacious Fields very fertile in Corn, and has plenty of excellent Honey. It equals the beft Towns in Lembardy for the Largenefs and Number of its Palaces; it was formerly fo powerful, that it maintain'd a War againft the Marquils of Mentferrat and his Confederates. It was taken by the Duke of Vendome in 1703, but abandon'd by the French afterwards, and has been fince well fortified by the Duke of Savoy. The French attack'd it in vain in 1705.

Turin or Augusta Taurinorum, lics in one of the pleafantest Vallies in Italy near the Deire. a little above where it falls into the Po, twelve Miles North-East from Pignerol, 18 South-East from Sufa, 40 North East from Ambran in Dauphine. It is one of the finell Cities in Italy for the Magnificence of its Buildings, the Beau ty of its Streets and Squares, the Number and fociable Temper of its Inhabitants, and the Abundance of all Commodities necessary for Life. The Architecture of the Duke's Palaces is very noble, but their principal Beauty confilts in their fine Apartments. The other 10 markable Structures are, the Palace of the Prince of Carignan, the two Convents of the Jefairs, the Chapel of the Holy Handkerchief, which they pretend was our Saviour's, and is kept there ; the Convent of the Minims, the Citadel, which is every where countermin'd, the Royal Square before the Duke's Palace, that of St. Charles furrounded with Houfes of a beautiful Proportion, and under them very fine and lofty Gallerics; the Street which croffes thefe two Squares from the first to the new Gate, and most Streets of the new Town have Piazza's on both fides. The old Town isirre-Bular, the Streets narrow and cronked, the Houfes mean. Here is a Castle of a Pentagon Form, and a Park 6 Miles in Circuit, encompass'd with Rivers, and full of Woods, Lakes, and Fountains, and abounding with all Sorts of Game. In short, this City is one of the fines, and most regular built in Europe.

The Churches are magnificent Structures, adorn'd with Painting, Gilding, and other fuitable Ornaments; their Academies for Riding, Dancing, and all Martial Exercises, are noble, and well furnish'd with Masters, fo that there is fearce any Thing wanting to make it a most glorious City.

The Datchels's Palace is adorn'd with a cutious Cabiner, and a new Bathing-place above it, hung with Original Pictures in Miniature, of all the great Ladies in Europe. The City is not very large, but regularly inclos'd with new l'ortifications; the Citadel exceeds all the reft for Strength and Beauty, and confifts of 5 regular Ballions. The Walks of Oak trees on the Rampart are very delightful, and afford an agreeable Shade, with a delicious Prospect towards the Rivers.

The Avenues to the City are very pleafant, as alfo is a Walk of Elm-trees about a Mile in length down to the Banks of the Po, where there's there's a fine Palace call'd Valentin, nobly furnish'd with Paintings, and rich Hangings; but about 3 Miles from the City the Duke has a noble Country-house call'd La Venery Rayal, excellently well furnish'd with the finest Pictures. It was ruin'd by the French in the last War, but repair'd fince.

About a Quarter of a Mile from the City, on the Banks of the Po, Itands Monte d'Oro, or the Golden Mountain, which has fo much Variety of high and low Grounds, with a valt many Windings and Turnings, and abounds fo much with Fruits, Trees, Fountains and Country Seats, that it well deferves the Name, and relembles a City of it felf.

The last Siege of Turin oblig'd the Duke of Savoy to refire to the Vallies, and his Mother and Dutchefs fied to Genoa : The French pulh'd on the Siege with great Vigour, but Prince Eugene, by a speedy and dangerous March of 34 Days, join'd the Duke at Afti, where they attack'd the French in their Camp, forc'd their Intrenchments, intirely routed them, and freed the City in 1706. The Duke of Orleans retird with the Remainder of the French Army. In this Battle they loft 3 Generals, 2 Marshals of Camp, a Brigadier, 8 Colonels, 12 Lieutenant Colonels, 6 Majors, 98 Captains, 111 Lieutenants, 34 Coronets, 13 Engineers and Commiffaries of Artillery, and 7640 private Soldiers, 225 Canons, 108 Mortars, 7800 Bombs, 32000 Royal Grenades, 48000 Cannon Balls, all their Tents and Baggage, with a great Number of Standards, Colours, Kettle-Drums.

Drums, and of all other Things in Proportion.

Sufa on the River Doria, at the Foot of the Alps, 20 Miles North-West from Turin, is fo important a Place by its Situation, that the French always endeavout'd to take it when they had War with the Duke of Savoy. Lewis the 13th enter'd it in Triumph in the Year 1629. after having defeated Victor Amadeus, Duke of Savoy, who disputed the Pals of Susa Bainst him. Monsieur Catinat took it in 1690, but it was reftor'd with its Fortifications, to the Present Duke in 1696, the Duke de la Fuillade took it again in 1704, and demolish'd the Ciladel with its other Fortifications ; its Strength is owing chiefly to a Fort call'd Brunette, upon the forming of which the Citadel furrender'd. The Sepulcher of Cottus is here, from whence this Part of the Alps is call'd Alper Cottie.

Verue was a firong Fortification on the Po, over ag inft Crefcentin, (with which it has a Bridge of Communication) upon the very Confines of Montferrat; it flands 28 Mi es West of Casal, and 19 East of Turin; it had been lately fort fied with new Lines round it in 1704, and in 1705 it made a most remarkable Defence for full 6 Months against the Duke of Vendome, and even at last did not furrender, till the Governor had resolutely blown up a'l the Fortifications, except the Donjon. It is computed, that the French lost about 20000 Men before it, when they became Massers of it; they asterwards demolished the Donjon, and made all a Heap of Rubbish.

Lefore

Before Verrse on the East-fide, there is an Eminence with a ftrong Fort, call'd Gerbignan, where the Duke of Savoy had ftrong Entrenchments, when Vendome fat down to befiege the Town, his Royal Highness maintaining a Communication between these Entrenchments and his Camp at Crescentin, but at last after a long and vigorous Resistance, he was fore'd to abandon them in 1704.

Lorea is a Place of great Confequence to the Duke of Savoy, being a confiderable Fortification on the River Doria, defended with a Cafile and a Citadel, but was fore'd to furrender to the Duke of Vendome in 1704. In this Marquifare there are three Places call'd Front, St. George, and Aglie, which give Names to three large Diffricts; the French pillag'd them with inhumane Barbarity in 1705, during the Siege of Chivas; whereup in the Peafants growing defperate by their ill Ufage, to k Arms and kill'd a great Number of them.

Nice is a great, populous and fplendid City, a Bifhop's See, fubject formerly to the Arcibilhop of Ambrun; it flands upon the Mediterrantan 2 Miles from the Mouth of the River Varo, 7 Miles Weft of Port Monaco, and 8 Miles Ealt South-East from Vence in Provence. The Place is flrong by Nature, fo that in the Year 1545, (when its Fortifications were b t ordinary) the Castle held out against the French, with whom the Turks commanded by Barbare Ja, were join'd. 'Tis beautified with a reat Cathedral, a rich Chapel of the Jef ic, an impregnible Citadel, and a Palace with very rich Hangings, and Bafforelievo's in Marble. In 1705. the Savoyard Garrifon abandon'd the Town, being in no Condition to ftand an Affault, and retir'd into the Caftle, where they made fo refolute a Refiftance, that the Duke de la Fuillade was forc'd to turn the Siege into a Blockade; after which it was formally befieg'd hy the Duke of Berwick in the Beginning of November the fame Year, and held out till January the 14th 1706, when it furtender'd upon honourable Terms. The French have fince demolifh'd the good Fortifications thereof.

Monaco is a little, but well fortified Town on the Top of a Rock, looking down to the Sea, fubject to its own Prince, of the Family of Grimaldi, but under the Protection of France. It lies 7 Miles East by South of Villa Franca, and has a very good Harbour. The Prince's Palace is uniform, capacious, and well furnish'd with Pictures, Plate, and rich Hangiogs.

This Prince had been long under the Protection of the King of Spain, who laid fuch heavy Impositions on him, that of late he put himfelf under the Protection of the French King, and lives for the most part at Paris, having a confiderable Pension allow'd him in France: The King imploy'd him as his Minister at Rome. There is a Garrison of 600 Soldiers in the Town, paid by the French King. The prince has a Company of Switzers for his Guards, and lives very fplendidly.

The laft Marguis fold it to the Spaniards in 1599, or (as fome will have it) was furpriz'd by the Spaniards in 1602, who put the faid Marquils to Death It is the on v Sea port belo: ging to the St te of Milan, but w s flipslated to the King of Frank by the Treaty of Partition. The Fortificad ons are put into a very good C ndi ion finde ir fell into the Hands of the King of France and his Grandson.

Genoa is a City of great Antiquity upon the M ditetranean-Shore, 62 Miles South of M lan and 80 South. East of Turin; it stands the Form of a Theater, at the Bottom of a Ittle Gulf upon the Af.ent of a Hill, opening it felf to the Sea, fo that the Port lies open and affords hut in lifferent Anchorage. It fo full of flately and regular Build ngs Palace Churches, Hof itals, Monasteries, &c. that it's proverbial Epithet is, Genoua la Superbi The Situation 'ying u on a Defe nt, the Streets are uneven and narrow, effecially in the lower Part, where the Houfes are fix or feven Stories high.

This Republick is under an Ariftocratical Governm nt, like tha of Venice. Its Doge of Duke continues only two Years, to whom eight principal Officers, call'd Signiori, are as Affi it nts, fubordinate in Matters of great Impor tance, to the Gr nd Cnuncil, confifting of 40% Per ons, all G nt men of the City; both which conflicute the Body of the Common wealth wealth. This State at prefent is decaying, and fubject to feveral Sovereigns; fome Praces of its Territories bylong to the Duke of Savoy, fome to the Duke of Tufcany, others are free, others lately taken by the French. In the Year 1458, the Sovereignty of the State was made over to the King of France as Protector, and continued in his Hands until the Impriforment of Francis the First, taken by the Emperor Charles the 5th at the Battle of Pavia in 1528, when the Republick put it felf under the Protection of Spain; in Refentment whereof the King of France bombarded it in 1684, and burnt down the Doge's Palace with many other farely Buildings; the melancholy Marks of which Tragedy are yet to be feen. Some private Perfons in this City are very rich, but the Publick Treafury very low.

Barcelona, one of the largeft, handlomeft, belt built, and molt populous Cities in Spain; it ows its chief Strength to the Fortrefs of Monjui, which ftands on the Top of a neighbouring Hill, and is ftrongly fortified with good Walls, Buffions and other neceffary Works: The Town is also well fortified, and divided into Old and New by a Wall, through the Gates of which they have a Communication. Here are feveral magnificent Churches; the City is as big as Naples: The Nobility here eniny great Privileges, fo that no Gentleman c in the imprifon'd. The Pope is Heir to the Bifhop, and has an Officer always ready to feize his Goods and Chattels as foon as he dies. There is a Mole which runs' 750 Paces into the M 2

Sea, which fecures the Gallies from Tent pelts.

Saragoffa is a very large City, the Houfes² great deal finer than at Madrid, the publick Places are adorn'd with Portico's, as in Covent-Garden in London. The Vault of St. Francu's Church is very furprizing, by Realon of its exceeding Breadth, without any Pillars to up hold it.

Burgos is likewife a large and populous City, most of the Streets very streight, but dirty and ill built, yet there are abundance of fine publick Buildings, and it has fome large Streets, and open Places adorn'd with good Fountains and Statues: It is very remarkable for the Convent of the Augustins, where is a Crucifix in great Veneration, in a pretty large Chapel of the Cloifter, fo dark that nothing could be feen in it were it not for the Lamps that con tinually burn there, being above 100 in Num ber, Silver or Gold, and of fo extraordinary^a Bignefs, that they cover all the Vault of that Chapel : There are al'o 60 Silver Candlefficks taller than any Man, and fo maffive, that they can hardly be mov'd, except by two of three Men together ; they fland on the Ground all on a Row on both Sides of the Altar; thefe that are upon the Altar are of maffive Gold; between them are to be fen feveral Croffes full of precious Stones, and Crowns hanging upon the Altar, adorn'd with Diamonds and Pearls of exceeding Beauty: The Hangings in the Chapel are very thick Cloth of Gold It is fo loaded with Ratities, and the Effects of bigotted bigotted Vows, that there is not Room enough to hold them all, but a good Part is laid up in the Treasury. The holy Crucifix (as they call it) is rais'd upon the Altar, cover'd with three Curtains one upon another, all border'd with precious Stones and Pearls. When they are drawn (which happens only in great Ceremonies, and for Perfons of Diffinction) they ring the Bell, and every Body kncels and proftrates himfelf with the greatest Humility imaginable.

Segovia is a Place of no great Moment, and remarkable only for its Aqueduct, which is 5 Leagues long, having above 200 Arches of an extraordinary Height; in feveral Places there are 2 Arches one upon another, all of Free-stone, without Mostar or Cement; it is believ'd to be a Roman Work.

Madrid lies on the little River Manzanares, about 26 Miles North from Toledo, on an uneven rifing Ground; the Air thereof is very healthful; it was a flourishing City before the Present Wars, and is (including the Gardens and Suburbs) about 15600 Paces in Compas. Philip the Second built a Bridge over the River (which commonly is dry in Summer) at a very great Charge, which occasion'd one to by pleafantly, That his Majefty would be oblig'd to fell the Bridge to buy Water for the River. The Streets are ill pav'd, and nafty, by reafon the People throw out their Dirt into them. The Town is not wall'd, therefore it is call'd a Village; and if so counted, it is the largest in Europe. The Houses are generally rally of Brick, many well built, the Streets regular and fpacious, fome of them very noble; in feveral there are Fountains, but not extraordinary.

The Royal Palace is very large, but of ancient Structure, and has nothing answerable to the Grandeur of the King, only its rich Movables: Several of the Grandees (elpecially fuch as have been Viceroys or Governours of Provinces) have much finer Palaces, the chief whereof are those of the Duke of Offuna, of the Amirant of Cafile's Lady, of the Countels D'Ognale, and of the Constable of Castile. The King's Palace ftands on an eafle Alcent of a Hill, extended to the Bank of the River from whence there is a pleafant Profpect into the Country : Most of the Rooms have no Light but what comes in at the Doors, and where there are Windows, they are fo fmall, that they afford but little Light ; the Reafon of this they pretend is to keep out the Heat of the Sun; but it is rather the Expensiveness of Glass, which is not feen on the out-fide, becaufe of the Lattifes; when a Spaniard deferibes a compleat House, he don't forget to tell that it 15 glaz'd.

There are many fine gilt Balconies in this Palace, the Gardens are neither largenor well kept, fo that their chief Beauty is owing to the Situation.

Place major is the fineft Square in the City, it is encompals'd with flately Houfes 6 or 7 Stories high, without Proportion or Order, loaded with Balconies from which the People fee lee the Bull fighting on folemn Days: They have also a Place call'd Confiferio, appointed for this Diversion.

At this Bull-fighting none are permitted to fight on Horfeback, but those that are known to be Gentlemen born. When the Bull is let out, the young Men on Foot throw their Arrows and Darts, trim'd with Cut-Paper, at him, which flicking in his Skin, adds to his Rage and Fiercenefs : The Cavalier runs at him, and approaches with his Lance which he holds like a Dagger, and thrufts at the Bull; if he breaks it, his Footman upplies him with another; but the Knight must not draw his Sword (which is short, and three Inches broad) till the Bull has either broke or forc'd the Lance out of his Hand, thrown off his Hat or Cloke, or wounded his Horfe, or fome of the Company, which the Knight must either revenge or die, especially if he himself be Wounded: He must give the first Cut with his Sword on the Bull's Head, Neck or Throat, but af erwards where ever he can. None mult affault the Bull but one at a Time, except in their own Defence. If the Knight be difmounted, or his Horfe unmanageable, he must engage him on Foot; the other Knights must allo difmount and follow him, not to affift him, but to try if by marching up they can frighten the Bull; and if he retires to the End of the Place, they have fatisfied the Laws of Duelling. This bloody and barbarous. Diversion they learnt from the Moors; and the Spaniards will never allow it to be abolilh'd, though the Const M 4

Court of Rome has feveral Times attempted to do it. They don't think it a fine Bull-fighting, unlefs ten or more Perfons lofe their Lives.

The Cathedral is a magnificent Building, the Virgin's Chappel has the Rails of its Altar of mafly Silver: Here is alfo a Statue of the Virgin, which they pretend St. James brought from the Holy Land.

Another remarkable Church is our Lady of Atocha's, that is, of the Bufh, in a fpacious Nunnery where they have an Image of the Virgin with a young Jefus, to which they afcribe many Miracles. The Chapel where the Image ftands, has 100 Lamps of Gold and Silver; the great Altar is adorn'd with a vaft Store of Plate, as are most of the Churches; they have Walks of green Turf fet with Flowets, and adorn'd with Fountains, from whence Water fprings into Bafons of Marble and Porphyry of Silver, furrounded with Jafmin and Orange-Trees planted in Boxes, among which they let loofe abundance of little Birds that make an harmonious Noife.

The Church of St lfidore, the Patron of Madrid, (though he was but a poor Labourer) exceeds all the reft in Magnificence; the Walls are lin'd with Marble of various Colours, and there are many Pillars and Statues of the fame. In the middle of the Roof of that of St. Se baftians, there is a fmall Steeple with Gold Bells in it, always carried by four Priefts, attended with a great Number of Flambeaus and mufical Inftruments when they carry the Hoft to any fick Perfon.

Buon retiro, without the Town, is a fine Palace belonging to the King, where there is a Theater well contriv'd, and spacious, adorn'd with much Carving and gilding ; adjoyning to it there is a Park three Miles in Compais, on which are feveral handfome Lodges, a Cana Supplied with Springs, and a large Pond fur I founded with Trees and Fountains, where the King diverts himfelf in the hot Scafon in fmall Brats finely painted ard gilt : It abounds alfo with Grotto's, Cataracts, and fhady Wa'ks, which render it extreme pleafart : Here the King has fine Stables for Saddle horfer, and a pacious Armoury.

Aranjues is another of the King's Palaces, leated in one of the pleafantest Places in the Kingdom, furrounded with noble Walks, a vaft Number of Fountains, with Statues of Brafs, and Mathle Basons, together with all Sorts of Poetical Reprefentations; the Fountains of Diana is the chief, where the is reprelented among Cupids, Bucks, Docs, and Dogs, all Ipouting Water.

The Efcurial, about 18 Miles North-Weft from Madrid, is reckon'd one of the most magnificent Structures in Europe ; it contains 17 Cloifters, 22 Courts, 11000 Windows, and coft above 30000000 of Ducars in building; therein is a Chapel for the Sepulchres of Kings and Queens, in Form like the Pantheon at Rome, whole Name it bears; they bury no King or Queen here, but fuch as leave Iffue behind them: It is 35 Foot in Diameter, cover'd all over with black Marble, very Magnificent baying having 6 Ifles; the Box for the Sacrament is round, and 16 Foot high, and feven and an half in Diameter, supported by 8 Columns of Diaspare, which is a Sort of Stone of the Colours of the Rainbow, and can't be wrought but by Diamonds; the Workmanship alone thereof cost 80000 Ducats: Over the Cuftodia there are the Statues of the 'Twelve Apofiles with a fine Picture of the Refurrection over them. They enter this Chapel (which is called the Segrario) by two Doors of Jasper, the Floor being cover'd with the same; and there are Ten Steps which lead up to the Altar? There is a curious Crystal Window on the East-fide with Iron-Bars gilt : The Chapter is beautiful with Pictures reprefenting the Eucharift, and a Rai bow with many Angels; there is fearce a Saint, of whom they don't pretend to have for ething; they hoalt of 550 Chalices of Gold, Silver and Crystal, one of which, they fay, was offer'd to our Saviour by one of the three Kings of the Eaft.

The Form of the whole Palace is a large Square, each Side of which is 3630 Foot long, with a fine Tower on each Corner, built of a hard Stone fpotted with Grey. The Front of the I-ner. Court is mighty remarkable, adom'd with 6 Pillars 68 Foot high each; upon which are plac'd 6 Pedellals, and upon them the Statues of King David, Solomon, Jofias, Hezeebias, Jebofaphat, and Manaffet, with Crowns of Brass on their Heads weighing 100 Pound each, and Scepters of the fame, 50 Pound each; David's Harp of the fame Metal, weighing 175 Pound; Pounds, and under each of these Kings there are Latin Inferiptions pointing at some of their chief Acti ns.

Sevilla is the Metropolis of Andaloufia upon the River Guadalquivir, which runs between it and its large Suburbs, 200 Miles South-Weft from Madrid, a great, rich and populons City, almost of a round Form; an Archbishop's See, and a Court of Inquisticn: It has an old Castle call'd Alcazar, a Cathedral reckon'd the largest in Spain, a stately old Palace inhabited tormerly by the ancient Kings; two other Royal Palaces, and a Tower, call'd The Golden Tower, for the Excellency of its Workmanship; besides a great Number of its Colleges, Chapels, and Religious Houses, with sweet Fonntains and Aqueducts conveying Water to the City from 16 Miles off.

The River carries Ships of Burthen up to the Town, where all the Gold and Silver brought from the Weft Indies, is unloaded, and most of it coin'd in this Place, there being a Mint for that Purpose, there being no other Mint in Spain but this and at Segovia.

When the Spaniards took it from the Moors, the Territory belonging to it was very populous, but by the Banilhment of the laid People, it is become almost defolate. Near this are the Ruins of Sevilla la Vecchia, alias Italica, that had the Honour of giving Birth to three Roman Emperois, viz. Trajan, Adrian and Theodofius.

Salamanea is a fine, large, well built and populous City, it has a famous University, reckon'd reckon'd the chief of Spain, and the Fourth in Europe.

Cadiz lies 52 Miles North Well from Gibraker, it is fituate in an Island, which was formerly much greater, but now is only 12 Miles long from East to West, and is join'd to the Coaft of Andaloulia by a Bridge. The Gulfor Bay form'd by this Island, is 12 Leagues in Circuit, and 2 Broad; it is defended by feveral Forts, whereof the most confiderable is the Puntal, and the Matagorda, where the Entry contracts it felf, and against which the Confederates rais'd a Battery in the Year 1702, but with no Succefs. The Puntal is a Fort of 20 Guns on the East-fide, or the Town fide, and the Matagorda of 22, on the Landfide: On each fide of the Channel of this Bay are Flats, which appear dry at low Water.

The Part of the Bay towards the City, is molt frequented, being the Rendezvous for the Gallies and Galleons that go and come from the Indies. Port St. Mary is also much frequented, where many of the Gentry and Merchants do live; it was taken and plunder'd by the Confederate Army in 1702, as well as Rotta, which lies a little further out towards the Sea. The Bay firetching it felf upon this Coast, is call'd The Bay of Bulls. The Town it felf, which gives its Name to the whole Island, itands on the Western thore; it is one of the Keys of Spain, and of fo great Importance, that the Emperor Charles the 5th recommended it particularly, together with Flushingue in the the Netherlands, and Goulet in Africa, to the Care of his Son Philip the Second, as abfolutely neceffary to the Confervation of his Dominions.

Gibralter, for its Height, Situation, Fortifications and Profpect, is reckon'd the fineft Cape in Europe ; the Hill is half a League high, and ftands upon a fmall Neck of Land about 200 Paces long, which at a diftance makes it look like an Island: On the top of the Rock there is a Tower, where a Watchman gives Notice to the Town what Number of Ships is paffing the Straits, by fetting up a Light for each.' It is fo fleep towards the Sea, that it is frightful to look down from it, and is fortified on the fide of the Town to the very Top, from whence there is a delightful Profpect 60 Miles into the Mediterranean; but another Hill at 9 Miles diflance hinders the Prospect into the Ocean. The Promontory of Mount Calpe, on the Defcent of which the Town is built, jets into the Sea about 2 Miles, and is about 6 Miles South East from Cadiz. This Mountain is one of Hercules Pillars, and Abila or Sierra de las Monas in Africk, the other; on each fide of which there is a Chapel, the one call'd Our Lady of Europe, the other, Our Lady of Africk. The Town ftands at the Foot of the Rock, 'tis large and neat, giving its Name to the Straits that divide Europe from Africa, which in this Place is about 15 Miles broad : It is a Place of great Importance, it was taken by the English and Dutch in 1704, fince which the Spaniards and French have never been able to re take it, though they laid Siege to it, which was rais'd by the brave Defence of the British Soldiers, under the Conduct of the couraginus Prince of Heffe d'Armstad, together with the vigilant Sir John Lake, Admiral of the British Fleet, who with his Squadron reliev'd it twice, when it was reduc'd to the greatest Extremity; the last Time having taken or burnt all the Ships of Ponti's Squadron which lay in the Bav. They have a Mole into the Sea on one fide, which is of little Use, by reafon of the Rocks and shallow Water; wherefore they were oblig'd to build another near our Lady's Church, where there's a large Port mounted with a great Number of Canon.

tO

The Crown of Spain is hereditary under a Monarchical Government, and the King ftiles himfelf Catholick Majesty, whose Dominions are fo far extended, that the Sun never fets on them all.

The Spaniards are of a good Stature, firong, patient, fober, obstinate in Pursuit of their Defigns, faithful to their Prince, fit for great Undertakings, circumspect, miltrussful, discreet, Lovers of Liberal Arts and Sciences, but proud and lazy. The Women are handsome and well shap'd, witty, and much addicted to Gallantry, but kept under such a Restraint, that Strangers have feldom an Opportunity of conversing with them: They are of a swarthy Complexion, black Hair, of a Majestick Gate, grave and serious, temperate in Eating and Drinking, and they esteem Mechanick Arts dilhonourable.

All

All these numerous Kingdoms and Provin/ ces are govern'd by Viceroys or Deputies, ordain'd by his Catholick Majefty, who are commonly very fevere in exacting of the Subjects whatever they can, during their short Regency, commonly limited to 2 Years.

They are punctual Followers, and close adherers to the Church of Rome, the King fuffers no other Religion in his Dominions; wherefore the Pope confer'd on him the Title of Ca. tholick Majesty. Their Courts of Inquisition are justly charg'd with Cruelty, for they permit no Body to know their Accufers, or to vindicate themselves against them. They punish Children for the Faults of their Parents, and likewife the leaft Commerce or Affinity with what they call Hereticks, the keeping of prohibited Books, or reproving the Faults of the Clergy. If they cannot find two Witnefles, they examine by Torture; and though they find nothing against the Perfin accus'd, they keep them under a fevere Restraint for feveral Years, to terrifie others; and if they fall into a fecond Sufpicion, they are certainly put to Death.

The Air is generally very pure and calm, feldom infelted with Mifts and Vapours, but in Summer fo very hot, efpecially in the Southern Parts, that it is both dangerous and incommodious to ftir abroad about Noon from the middle of May to the latter End of August. The Soil in many Places is very dry and barren, feveral Provinces are either over grown with Woods, or incumbet'd with Sands or rocky 4.

Mountains, or neglected by the Lazinefs of the Inhabitants; but if it is deficient in fome Places in Corn, it fufficiently abounds with various excellent Fruits and Wine in others.

No married Man or Woman is privileg'd to lie in the Palace; all the Grandees have the Privilege of covering themfelves before the King, viz. those of the first Order, before they speak to him; of the second, after they have begun to speak; and those of the third, after they have spoken and retir'd to their Places. The Nobles of Spain make no Account of any Dukes, Counts, Marquiss, or Knights of the Orders.

Lisbon lies on the Banks of the Tagus, about 20 Miles Eaft from the Sea, in form of an Amphitheater, and contains 7 Hills and Vallies in its Circuit; on the higheft Hill there is a ftrong Caftle that commands the Town; betwixt this Caftle and the Harbour are many ftately Churches, magnificent Palaces, fine Squares with Piazza's; the Streets are large, and well pav'd, on one fide of the Town, but fome on the other fide are narrow, crooked, and very fteep.

The King's Palace is an Ornament to the City, and is very beautiful by Rea'on of its Regularity, and Magnificence of its Buildings. The City is about 20 Milesin Circuit, and has 22 Gates towards the Sea, and 16 towards the Land; 77 Towers on the Walls, 20 Monaster ries of Monks of scveral Orders, with 18 Nunneries. The River is navigable for about 20 Miles by the greatest Ships; the Cathedral is little little remarkable, except it be for its Antiquity. The Archbilhop has 40000 Ducats per Annim; there are feveral Mafter pieces of Painting, Architecture and Sculpture, round the Palace, and the Cnurt is reckon'd more magnificent than that of Spain.

There are many fine Villages and Gentlemens Seats in the Neighbourhood, and the adlacent Country abounds with Vineyards, Orchards, Qrange and Lemmon trees; in the hotteft Seafon there are conftant Breezes from the Sea in the Evening, which very much refresh the Inhabitants.

A League below the City is Belem, a Sort of Fort upon the River, with a little Town, where the Kings and Queens of Portugal are buried, and their Tombs are to be teen within a Church lin'd with white Marble. Near to Belem is a Tower, upon which is placted a great Number of Cannon, and over against it a little other Fort, which, with the other, commands the Entry of the Port intirely; nay, the River is lin'd with Forts all along the Way from Belem to the Sea on each fide; the most confiderable is that of St. Catherine at the Mouth of the River; opposite to which there is one nn the other fide, call'd the Wooden Fort, because it lands on Piles in the Sea.

The Air of this Country is much more temperate, effectially in the Maritim Places, than in thefe Provinces of Spain, that lie under the fame Parallels, being frequently qualified by Weflerly Winds, and cool Breezes from the Sea. The Soil being very dry, is not of the beft best for Corn, but very plentiful in Grapes, Oranges, Pomegranates, Almonds, Olives, &c.

There are 3 Archbilhops, and 9 Bilhopricks; the Town of Belem or Berblehem near Lishen, ¹⁵ noted for fumptuous Tombs of the Kings of Portugal.

Some characterize the Portugueze thus; take one of their Neighbours, and ftrip him of all his good Qualities (which may be eafily done) that Perfon will make a compleat Portuguez.

They were under the Spanish Government from the Death of their King Sebastian at the Battle of Alcazar in Africa, until the Year 1640, when the Portuguez not being able any longer to bear the Tyranny of the Spaniards, threw off that intolerable Yoke, and fet the Crown up on the Head of John of Braganza, call'd John the 4th, and firnam'd The Fortunate; ever fince it has continued an independant Kingdom, truly Monarchical, and the Crown hereditary.

The Tenets of the Church of Rome are universally embrac'd here, as in Spain, only with this Difference, that they tolerate Jews, and allow feveral Strangers the publick Exercise of their Religion, particularly the English Factory at Lisbon.

St. Jago de Compostella is the Capital of Gallicia, encompass'd with Hills, and water'd with finall Streams; ic is chiefly remarkable for the fupposed Body of St. James the Apostle, the Spaniards pretending he was martyr'd here; he is look'd upon as the Patron of Spain, and his Cathedral is honour'd fo much, that 7 of the Canons muft be Cardinals. A vaft Number of Pilgrims come hither from all Parts of the Popifh World, to worfhip his Relicks, where there is one of the beft Holpitals in Spain for their Entertainment, confifting of two large Courts with Fountains in the middle; the great Concourfe of Strangers upon that Account, has occasion'd the building of many other magnificentHoufes; feveral of theKnights of the Order of St. James refide here. The Body fuppos'd, is kept in a flately and

The Body fuppos'd, is kept in a ftately and magnificent Tomb; he is reprefented on the Altarin carv'd Wood, which the Pilgrims kils three Times', and put their Hatsas often on his Head. On the Top of the Church (which is cover'd with flat broad Stones) there's an Iron Crofs, to which the Pilgrims faften fome of their Rags, and then creep under it through fo ftraight a Paffage, that it frequently endangers their Lives, if they be corpulent. There's a French Chapel here very neatly kept, and another under Ground, with ftately Monuments, and ancient Inferiptions.

The Archbilhop's Palace is an ancient and noble Structure; the Cathedral is reckon'd one of the fineft in Spain. Here are a great many Monasteries of both Sexes: It has also an University, two great Squares, and very fine Streets.

Bayonne, on the Confluence of the Rivers Adour and Nive, has a good Harbour, but of difficult Accefs, and allo a good Caftle well gatrifon'd : It is one of the Keys of Spain, extremely well fortify'd. There are many Churches and Monalteries; but not remarkable.

Rochel (fo called from the Rocks it is built upon) is the Capital of the Country of Anni in the Weft of France on the Sea Coaft, 7 Miles Eaft from the Ifle of Re; the Citizens embrac'd the Reformation in 1567, and put themfelves into the Hands of the Protestant Psinces and Lords. It was befieg'd by the Duke of Anjou, Brother to Charles the 9th, but in vain; for it is obfervable, that when the City was prefid with Famine, vaft Shoals of Fishes (such as were never teen in those Parts before) came into the Harbour, which was a great Relief to the Inhahitants; and as foon as the Siege was rais'd they vanilh'd, and were never feen more.

We are inform'd in Hiftory, that most of the chief Perfons concern'd in the Massacre (call'd of St. Bartbolomov) at Paris, were flain at this Siege, and among the reft the Duke d'Aumalt, and Mareschal Casson, who were the first that enter'd Admiral Colignies Chamber, and murther'd him: There died in the Massacre, befides three Masters of Camp, feveral great Lords and Gentlemen, 60 Captains, 60 Lieutenants and Ensigns, and about 20000 Soldiers.

It was besieg'd again in 1628 by Lewis the 13th, at the Instigation of Cardinal de Riebelieu, to weaken the Protestants to whom this Place was a Bulwark; the Inhabitants expected Help from King Charles the First, of Great Britain

Britain, who fent the Duke of Buckingham to relieve it, who landed at the Ifle of Ré, in order to fuecour the Town, but in vain, for which his Conduct was very much fulpected and blam'd: He was ftab'd afterwards by one Felton, who was a Lieutenant under him, at Porifmouth, as he was going the fecond Time to attempt the Reli f of it with a Fleet; which howe er proceeded but without neceffary Provisions; fo that it was taken the 29th of Ostober 1628. after 7 Months Siege, the King having order'd a Mole of a prodigious Bulk to be made to block up the Harbour.

During this Siege the Citizens fuffer'd fo much by a terrible Famine, that they were forc'd to eat Dogs, Cats, Rats, Mice, Horfes, Hides, Leather, and even fome of the Flefh of the Dead; and of 15007, not above 4000 e-leap'd this dreadful Famine. Wheat was at 29 Pounds a Bushel, Bread at 20 Shillings a Pound, Mutton 6 Pounds a Quarter of a Pound, Butter 30 Shillings a Pound, Eggs 8 Shillings a Piece, Wine 2 Pounds a Quart, Milk 3 Pounds, and dried Fifh 20 Shillings a Piece. The People who furviv'd were meer walking Skeletons. The French King demolifh'd the Wallsland Fortifications of the Town, de-Priv'd it of its Privileges, and perfecuted the Protestants contrary to the Edict of Pacification. He fuffer'd no Fortifications to remain, but 2 Towers for the Defence of the Harbour, and a Boom cross the Entry of the Port, which is lock'd up every Night.

Lewis

Lewis the 14th built a ftrong Citadel here, and other Works in 1689, to prevent the Defcent of the English and Dutch, and to keep the new Converts in Awe. The Town is fquare, about 3 Miles in Circuit, and the Harbour is formed of a Canal a Mile long, and half a Mile broad, where Ships ride very fafe.

Bourdeaux is feated on the Weft Bank of the Rive: Garonne, a Parliament-City; the Amphitheater built by the Emperor, and the Ruins of other Roman Monumen's, are Proof of its Antiquity and former Splendour; it is shill one of the finest, largest, and richest Towns in Europe; the Tide which flows 20 Miles higherbrings large Vessels up to its Harbour, call'd the Moon, because it lies in Form of a Crescent, and is 5 Miles in Length; the City its felf is of the fame Form.

During their Fairs of March and October, this Harbour is fill'd with Ships of all Nations, which come to load Wine and Brandy here. The Parliament-houfe, Town houfe, Market-places, publick Fountains, Key and Cathedral, deferve a Traveller's View. It is commanded by three Caffles, the most confiderable of which is Chateau Tromperte; it lies 52 Miles from the Sea, at the Mouth of the River there is a stately Fort and Watch-Tower, call'd la Tour de Cordoan which is the finelt of its kind in Europe.

Toloufe on the Garonne, about 32 Miles Welt from Montauban, and 317 South-Welt from Paris, is reckon'd one of the larg-ft and finest Towns of the Kingdom next to Paris. The Parliament is the fecond in France; the Romani folom-

Iolemniz'd Floral Games here, attended with feveral immodeft Shews, the Remembrance of which is ftill kept up for the Encouragement of Poetry, and other Learning, under the Authority of the Parliament and Magistrates, who distribute three Flowers of about 14 Pounds Sterling each, to those who succeed best in their Performances.

The City is divided into two Parts by the River Garonne, and into eight Wards govern'd by their refpective Capitols. The Cathedral-Church has a very high Tower, wherein there's ^a great Bell call'd Ardaillac, of fuch a Weight, that they dare not ring it left the Tower thould fall. In the Market-place before it there's a flately Tower adorn'd with a fine Obelisk; the Archbifhop's Palace is very beautiful, and the Town-house one of the handfomest in France.

About the Court of Merchants there is a Cage into which Blasshemers are shut before they are thrown into the Garonne. There is the Island of St. Anthony form'd by the Garonne, and inhabited only by Tradessen. They say the Observantins have a Vault in their sumptuous Moniastery, which preferves dead Bodies from Corruption or Confumption without any Art

There are Mills which turn 16 Mill-fiones at a Time for grinding Corn, and a great Number of Engines for currying Leather; which are the greateft Curiofities of the City. St. Saturnine is an accient Collegiste-Church, on the Top of which there are Guns fo plac'd, that the many Pillars that fupport the Building, N 4 cannoe cannot cover People from their Shot: The Reafon of this Precaution, is the great Treafure kept in the Church, where there are above 50 Silver Skree s gilt, befides a vaft Number of rich Jewels and Ornaments of it, and the flater ly and rich Tombs of the ancient Counts, Prelaters and Noblemen of this City: It is reckon'd the fecond in France for Riches and Extent.

Montauban is sca ed on the Ri er Tarn, divided into three Parts, the Old, the New, and Ville Bourbon on the other side of the River, over which there is a fair Stone-Bridge. This City was one of the Cautionary Towns given to the Pro estants in 1562, by King Henry the 4th; it asterwards held out three Sieges, but in 1629, it was taken by Lewis the 13th the Inhabitants being hetray'd by the Duke de Lefdiguieres and some other great Men; upon which the King demolish'd its Foreissteations.

While it was in the Hands of the Proteftants, they had here an Academy for Divini y, Philofophy, and Languages; it is allo noted for a good College of Phyficiars, and for its Cellars of extraordinary Depth to keep their Wine in.

Montpellier, 28 Miles West from Nismes, flands upon a Hill, and is the Capital of Lower Languedoc, the largest and most flourishing City of the whole Province, next to Toloufe; it's Academy is one of the most famous in Europe. Physick has its Precedency in its University, yet the Civil and Canon Law are both taught here by four Royal Professors, who confer the Degrees of Licentiates and Doctors.

It was also given as a Cautionary Town, by Henry the 4th, to the Protellants, and taken from them after along Siege, by Lewis the 13th in 1622; but the Protellants continued fhill very numerous, till the late Perfecution of Lewiss the 14th.

It is govern'd by 6 Confuls, who are the King's Viguiers or Bailiffs, who have great Power and Attendance. The Merchan's hype likewile their Confuls, and a particular Court for Debts. The City is adorn'd with many flately Buildings, as the Palace of Juffice, the Royal College for Humanities, and the Citadel flank'd with 4 Baftions. 2 within, and 2 without the Town, built on purpose to keep the Protestants in Awe.

The Churches are also very fumptuous, and particularly St. Peter's and St. Mary's. Without the Town lies the Royal Garden of Simples, extraordinary well kept and furnish'd. The Ceremonies perform'd at making a Doctor of Physick, are worth seeing, particularly their putting on and off seven Times the Candidate Rablais's old Gown. Their Confection of Alkermes is solemnly made in the Presence of the Magistrates, and one of the Professions of Physick.

Their Theriack or Treacle is as much cfleem'd as that of Venice: Their Powder of Cyprus, Queen of Hungary-water, Effences and Perfumes, are valued all over Europe.

The Soil is very gond, and the Air the most wholfome of all France, and counted very foveraign against Confumptions. The City has a fine a fine Prospect of the Gulph of Lions, from which it lies about 6 Miles North. The Houfes are, for the most Part, of Free-Stone, well built, but the Streets are narrow and crooked.

About 6 Miles from this City is Peroul, there is a Fountain where the Water bubbles as if it were boiling; and if Water be poured in a Hole dug near it, 'twill bubble in the fame manner, which I afcribe to a Vapour afcending out of the Earth.

Nilmes is 27 Miles from Montpellier, the Remains of many flately Edifices denote its great Antiquity. The Square-house and Temple of Diana are still to be difcerned by their Ruins; the Amphitheater call'd the Arenes, continues almost intire, being an Oval Wall of 470 Steps, and 63 Arches, built of large Stones without Mortar or Plaister, and has withstood the Fury of the Flames by which the Town has been feveral Times burnt, as appears by the Blacknefs of the Stones; the ancient Gates thereof are still intire, with the Figure of two Bulls Heads over them. There are two Towers over the new Gate, but the Seats of the Spectators are demolish'd; the Caves where the wild Beafts were kept, are fill'd up, and a great many Houfes are built in what was formerly its Circus : It ftood formerly without the Town, and was frequently made ule of as a Fort of Citadel.

The Square-house is 74 Foot long, and about 42 broad; it has 6 Columns on the Front, and so on each fide; it is flat on the top, and cover'd ver'd with large fquare Free-ftones, upon which People walk: There are many other ancient Monuments and Inferiptions.

The King's Caftle, the Column of Francis the First, with a Salamander on the top, the Tower where the Clock slands, the Crown-Gate with its Bulwark, and the President's Palace, deferves a Traveller's curious View and Observation.

There is a Cave or a fubterraneous Paffage that reaches to Arles, which is 20 Miles dilfant.

Henry the 4th affign'd this Place, as one of their Cautionary Towns, to the Protestants, where they continued the free Exercise of their Religion, and had half the Government, until Lewis the 14th Dragoon'd them in the late Perfecution. Its Situation is as pleasant as any in Languedoc, being encompass'd with charming Fields, and Hills cover'd with Vineyards and Fruit-trees; it has a famous Academy.

Pont du Gard, on the River Gardon, about to Miles North from Nifmes, is the Remains of a great Roman Work, which joins two Mountains together; it has three Rows of Arches one above another, the uppermost of which ferv'd for an Aqueduct to the Citv of Nifmes; the whole is 186 Foot high from the River which runs under the lowest Arch to the top of the uppermost; it brought Water from the Mountains of Remoulins into the City, and among other Uses it ferv'd to fill the Amphitheater with Water for to represent the Sea-Fights. The Water of the Gardon was brought into into the City by another Chancl, the Remains of which are fill to be feen.

Aix is about 55 Miles Eaft from Nifines, feated between two Mountains on the little River Are, it has a Parliament, a Mint and a famous Univerfity; it is one of the beft built, and pleafanteft Cities of the Kingdom; the Cathedral call'd St. Saviaur, has a Hexagone Tower, a Font of white Marble of excellent Structure, and a Dome fupported by Columns of caft Stone all round it; the Chapel of our Lady of Grace is very rich, and that of Sr. Maximin very ancient. They have feveral Monafteries, and a College of Jefnits. The Inhabitants are plentifully fupplied with Water by m ny very pleafant Springs; the Houles are flately, the Streets broad, with very handfome Piazza's.

In the Church of the Cordeliers is buried the famous Aftrologer Nofradamus, with a Stone in the Wall over his Grace, and an Infeription importing, That by his Skill in Aftrology he had forecold all that ever thou'd happen remarkable in the World, though most of his Predictions are nothing but unintelligible Cont-There are also feveral Remains of Roman Antiguity in and about this City.

Orange is diftant from Air 45 Miles North-Welt, and about 12 from Avignon; it is the only Place of Note in the whole Principality, feated in a pleafant Country abounding with Fruit and Corn, but liable to frequent Winds; it was the Seat of a Parliament confifting of half Protestants, and half Papifts; but Leavis the the r4th chang'd it into a Viguiery in 1687, fubject to the Parliament of Aix. Its ftrong Citadel and Fortifications were demolifh'd by the French King, and the Proteftant Religion forbid. King William the Third having recover'd this Principality by the Treaty of Refwick, reftor'd the Proteftants; but fince his Death the French King feiz'd the Principality, and turn'd them out again, with as much Injuffice as he did in 1672. The greateft Fame of this City is, That it gave the Titles to the Princes of that Name of the Houfe of Naffau.

Marseilles lies upon the Mediterranean 20 Miles South from Aix, and about 25 North-Welt from Toulon ; it is one of the fineft, largeft and beft built Cities of the Kingdom, noted for the f feft Harbour in the whole Mediterrinean; it is the ufual Station for the King's Gallies, and most Ships that trade to the Lewant touch there, which adds to its Riches; it has been very much enlarg'd by the prefent King, well fortified with Walls, Baftions and Towers ; it has 6 Gates, and the Harbour is to fafe, that it was never known that a Ship was call away in it, being cover'd by 2 Rocks from any Tempelt, and has a Boom at the Entrance to prevent the coming in of Pirates, or any Enemics Ships.

It is also defended by a firong Fortress on St. Atary's Hill, and there are Beacons for 60 Miles on the Coast to alarm the Country upon the As preach of any Enemy. The Harbour is capable of holding 500 Ships, but mone of above 600 Tuns; the Entrance of it is narrow; most most of the Hou'es are of Stone, the Streets not wide.

The chief Things to be feen here, are the Arfenal, the Citadel, South-walk, Market-Places, Churches, Monalteries, Seminaries, Hofpitals, the College of the Oratorians, and the Fountains: The adjacent Country abounds with pleafant Gardens, Meadows and Orchards, and has above 15000 Villages in it, fome very near the City.

Toulon, about 25 Miles East from Marfeilles, was at first a Castle only, built for the Defence of the Coast; it has now one of the best Hatbours of the Mediterranean, a fine Arsenal, Magazines for Men of War. The City is of no large Compass, but well built, and adorn'd with many stately Churches, Monasteries, and other publick Edifices. It is fortified with strong Walls, 2 Royal Bastions, and 2 Moles of 700 Paces each, done by Henry the 4th, and fince that Lewis the 14th has finish'd its Fortifications. This Place is the greatest and finest Storehouse for Maritim Affairs in the Kingdom.

Lyons is feated on the Conflux of the Rhone and the Saone, about 210 Miles South-East from Paris, 58 from Geneva, and as much from Grenoble. It is faid, that Pontius Pilate, who condemn'd our Saviour, was a Native of this City; that he was confin'd hither for his Extortion, as well as Herod Antipas with his Mistrefs Herodias, and that all three of them were flarv'd to Death here. Two General Councils were held here, viz. in 1245, and in 1274. It disputes with Roan for being the richest, largest, 4 and most trading City in France next to Paris. The Town is divided into two Parts, the greater lying between the Rhone and the Snone, called, the Quarter of St. Nizier; and the leffer that of St. John, divided into 32 Wards, go-vern'd by their proper Officers. It is encom. paged with large Suburbs, and has an old frong Caffle cut out of a Rock, therefore call'd Pierre-cife, where the Prifoners of State are confin'd, adorn'd very handfomly with many stately Edifices, among which their Guild Hall is reckon'd a Master-piece of Architecture. It has the Ruins of feveral Roman Structures, particularly of an Amphitheater, divers Aqueducts, publick Baths, &c. it has a long Stone-Bridge over the Rhone, and 3 over the Saone. On the Hill call'd St. Sebastian, there is a ftrong Fort with many Vaults and Cafemates : In the Suburb Veize there is a flately Maufoleum fupported by 4 Columns, fuppos'd to be that of Pilate, Herod, and Herodias.

The Cathedral has 9 Dignitaries, and 26 Canons, whereof the chief is the King; the Dean has the Title of Duke, and the Canons of Counts. There are 17 Parish-Churches, 15 Monasteries, and a noble Hospital of admirable Architecture. Upon the Bridge over the Rhome is a Cross that divides Dauphiné from Lyonnois; here is a Magazine well furnish'd with all Necessaries for War. The Townhouse feems to refemble that of Amsterdam, the Stair.cafe and Hall of it are worth a Traveller's View. La Charité is a noble Structure compos'd of 9 Courts, where 1500 poor People are arc kept always at Work. The Cabinet of Monfieur Servier is mighty curious, full of Mathematical and Mechanical Inventions, among the relt a Model how to change three or four Times, by Means of a Wheel that moves, both the Guells, Table and Scats from one Room into an ther.

In the Tower of the Cathedral they have a . Clock much admir'd for the Variety of its Motions, and Mechanick Work. The Jefuits College on the Rhome is the finelt Structure of the whole City, being a regular Square curioufly painted in Frefco.

Dijon is about 130 Miles South East from Paris. one of the most considerable Towns in the Kingdom, large, and well built, its Walls very strong, and urrounded with Bastions and Towers, having a Castle stank'd with 4 large Towers, and 2 Ravelins: Their most confiderable publick Buildiogs are the Church of the Carthusians, adoro'd with the Tombs of the Dukes of Burgundy; the Hall for Justice, the Royal Pal ce, the Town-house, 16 Churches, 2 Abbies, and 5 Holpitals.

The States of the Country of Lyonnois, meet here once in 3 Years, and the Mayor is oblig'd to take an Oath, by which he twears Fealty to the King, and that he thould defend the Rights and Privileges of the City against any Perfoneven against the King himsels, as often as Necefficy thould require.

Orlean is teated on the North East Banks of the River Leire, about 90 Miles South-West from Peris, built upon a rising Ground, and on the

the Defcent thereof down to the River fide in Form of a Bow. The City is large, and well built, the Streets broad, ftreight, neat, and pav'd with small square Stones; it has several Places shaded with Trees, which render the City very pleafant, which made the Emperor Charles the 5th fay, That he had feen in France a World, meaning Paris; a City, meaning Orleans; and a Village, meaning Poisiers; becaufe tis fill'd with Gardens. The Town house is a noble Structure, having a large Clock, the Bell whereof weighs 80000 Pound. The Houfes are generally fair and beautiful, the? ancient ; it is fortified with a Terrals and a ftrong Wall, upon which there are 20 Towers fill'd with Earth; it has 8 Gates, and before it there is a very pleafant Peninfula join'd to it by a Bridge of 16 Arches. The Wine of this City is counted the ftrongest in France, fo that the King's Butler is forbid to ferve his Majesty with any, being reckon'd not very wholfome. The adlacent Country is very pleafant, being interpers'd with Vincyards, Gardens, Orchards, Meadows, and arable Land. The Vineyards about the Town contain 22 Parifhes, and the Country-houles are better than usually in other Parts of France. The Inhabitants of the City, and of the adjacent Country, are for the most part courteous and polite; the best French is Poke here and at Blois: All the Ways leading to the Town are pav'd with a hard Flint for 9 Miles round it ; it is the only fortified Town In the Country.

Troy;

Troy, on the Seine in the Province of Champaigne, 76 Miles South Eaft from Paris, flands in a fruitful Soil, very well fituated and fortified, capable of holding out a long Siege. It is populous pleafant, and has a great Trade for Linnen: Here are 2 Collegiate, and 6 Parochial Churches, with 3 Abbies befides the Cathedral, a very magnificent Structure, to which 40 Canons belong; they pretend to have fome of our Saviour's Hair, one of the Difhes us'd at his laft Supper, a Piece of the true Crob, Ore.

Paris, the Metropolis of the Kingdom (befides the Seine, on which it is fituated, and the Marne which falls into it) is water'd with mar ny other Streams that fall into both, which make the Transportation of Commodities from the neighbouring Country to the City more easie. It is divided into two Parts, viz. the City and the University; the City is encompaird on one fide with the Seine, and on the other with Walls : It has 5 Suburbs, viz. of St. Anthe ny, St. Martin, the Temple, St. Dennis, and St. Honore. The University lies Southward of the Scine, and has 4 Suburbs, viz. of St. Mar-ceau, St. Jacque, and St. Germain. The whole is reckon'd almost as large as London, but not fo populous. The King's Palace call'd the Louvre, is the flatelieft in Europe ; and had it been finilh'd according to the first Delign, it wou'd cer ainly exceed all the Structures in the World whereas there are but two Sides compleated on the Porches thereof there are feveral lofty · Inferiptions in Commendation of the Building 2:0

There is in and about Paris a great Number of magnificent Buildings; I took notice chiefly of the Royal Hospital for disabled and aged Soldiers, compos'd of four Squares, and one very large in the middle, with Piazza's and Galleries round them all. The Sorbonne and Navarre are the two most famous Colleges for Divinity. The Cathedral of our Lady is an ancient Gotbick Building ; the Jefuits Church, that of St. Genevieve, the ancient Abbey of St. Germain, where the French Kings us'd to be inter'd before they chose St. Dennes for their Sepulchers; the Church of Val de Grace, and its Nunnery founded on the miraculous Birth of the prefent King, by Ann of Austria, Queen of France, after she had been married 22 Years, Without having a Child; the Altar and Cupola thereof are exceeding fine; on the Portal are thefe Words;

Jesu nascenti, Virginique Matri.

The

Rex, Regnum, atque Domus, tria sunt Miracula Mundi;

The Nuns of this Place arc all of Noble Extraction, and chuse their Abbessies once in three Years.

The Pont Royal is a ftrong, plain Stone. Bridge crofs the Seire to the Tuilleries, which is a fine Garden joining to the Louvre. Post neuf is a curiors Fabrick, upon which flands the Statues of Henry the 4th on Horfeback, of excellent Workmanship. Pont the Notredame, upon which are Houfes built, as upon London-Bridge; there is a Noble Monurent crected in Place Villoire, for the prefent King, by the Duke de la Feuillade, which is counted the belt Piece of Statuary in Europe; the whole Mould was caft all at once, and weighs above 30000 Pounds. The Pedestal is 22 Foot high, and that ogether with the King's Statue, and the Angel that crowns him, near 40 Foot. Upon the Pedestal there are Four Slaves of Brafs, with Boffo relievo's of his Battels and Conquests The Place Royalle is pret y large, enclos'd with Buildings and Piazza's or Walks, and the Plat form with Iron Rails; here is the Statue of Lewis the 13th on Horfeback. The molt remarkable Gates of Paris, are those of St. Anthony St. Bernard, St. Dennis, and St. Martin, all stately Pieces of Architecture, and of a great height, refembling Triumphal Arches, with Bofforelievo's, Trophies and In-foriptions relating to the Actions of the profent King. They pretend to have in the Chapel of St. Lewis (which belongs to the Lawyers) the very Spunge dipped in Vine ar which was given to our Saviour; the Head of

of the Spear with which his Side was pierc'd, and the Purple Robe intire with which he was cloathed; though at Rome they flew a Piece of it with great Affurance.

The Obfervatory, without Porte St. Jacque, is a vanited Fabrick (hree Stories high, without Wood or Iron-Work; underneath there is a Cave to which one defeends by 200 Steps into little Alleys, from whence there is a Profpect through the very Top of the Houfe to the Sky, in order to obferve the Motion of the Stars by Day; but this Contrivance falling fhort of the Expectation, they imputed it to this Defect, That no Stars pass through the Zenith of Paris.

The Houfes are generally fix or feven Stories high, built with white Free-flone, they have generally Safh-Windows, and look very handtome; there are 32 Palaces. The Citizens have no Pumps, but preferve their Water in Cifterns, which is brought either from the River, or the publick Fountains

The City is govern'd by the Provoft of the Merchants, fomewhat like our Lord Mayor, four Echevins or Aldermen, 26 Counfellors, 10 Serjeants, and Under-Officers. For administring Juffice, there is a Provoft, 3 Lieutenants, with a Judge, and Conful of the Merchants. They have 120 Archers, 100 Arguebusiers, and fome Horfemen to gn the Rounds every Night, commanded by a Chevalier du Gué. The most rematkable Places about Paris, are,

Ver failles,

Versailles, which lies about 12 Miles Welt from Paris, reckon'd one of the moft magnificent Palaces of the World; it stands upon a little Height in the middle of a Valley, encompass'd with Hills : On the fide towards Paris there are three fine Walks, with Rows of Elms, the middle Walk being twenty Fathom wide, the Side-Walks ten Fathom each. The great Canal is mighty remarkable, 800 Fathom long, and 32 wide : the Court fome times diverts it felf upon it in Gallies and Yatchs. The Front of the Palace towards the Garden, has a Piazza 100 Yards long. This Palace surpasses all that can be imagin'd, either fumptuous or excellent ; the Roof glittering with Gold, affords a glorious Prospect at a Diftance; and the Gardens for Statues, Canals, Groves, Grotto's, Fountains, Water Works, and every Thing that is delightful, furpaffes by far any Thing in Italy.

The Royal Cabinet for Medals, Coins, Paintings, Sc. has the Choice of what Italy could afford. The King's Lodgings are furnifh'd with Utenfils of maffy Plate, even the Bed-fteads, Banifters, and Rails, are of the fame; fo that the Riches and Beauty within anfwers, to the full, the out-fide. The King's Stables, for Proportion and Conveniency, are thought the fineft in Europe. The little Palace has its particular Court at the End of a great Walk fet with Trees, the chief Apartment is Octogone, confifting of a Hall, with two little Pavillions before it; in the Middle of it there are Stairs witch lead into the Porch, and and thence into the Hall, which is encompafs'd with an Octogone-Court f parated by Iron. Rails from feven other Courts, into which there is a Profpect from Balconies, where one may fee an incredible Number of Foreign Beafts and Birds. On the other fide of the Canal, there is another flately Houfe call'd Trianon, which ferves the King for a cool Retreat after his Walks: The outward Front is 64 Fathom, in Form of an half Oval, in the Middle of which is the principal Gate of Iron with Banisters on each side, that join to the Pavillions, with fquare Buildings to the Right and Lefr, which have their feparate Courts ; and other Pavillions that form the Corners of the Front. The main Court is above 100 Foot long, and 75 wide; and the Caffle is adorn'd with a fine Banifter, and Veffels of Porcelain or China, dispos'd on the Top of the Houle, with Birds represented to the Life; and near it there is a Plot of fine Water-works, and a Garden always ftock'd with the best of Flowers. The Corniflies and Ceilings of the Hall belonging to it, are adorn'd after the Chinefe Way, and the Floors, Wainfcotting, &c. are all of China.

Marli, a Royal Palace half Way between Paris and St. Germains, a very pleafant Place, with fine Gardens and curious Water-works.

Madrid, a Palace near Paris, between it and St. Germains, begun by Francis the First, but never finish'd nor furnish'd: It is faid, that Prince order'd it to be built, and call'd after that Name; because being oblig'd by his O 4 Treaty Treaty with Charles the 5th, when Prifoner at Madrid in Spain, to come and pay his Ranfome there, he carried the Money to this Palace, and alledg'd he had fulfilled the Treaty by this Equivocation.

St. Cloud, a fmall Town 6 Miles Weft from Paris, with a Royal Palace; it was here King Henry the 3d died when he had been ftabb'd by a Fryer.

St. Germains en Lay, is 12 Miles from Paris, and 2 from Verfailles, feated upon a Hill on the Banks of the Seine, it is a Noble Palace, and was the Place. of Refidence of the Kings of France, before Verfailles was built.

Roven is the Capital of Normandy, the Seat of a Parliament and Archbishop; it is one of the greatest, richest, best peopled, and most ancient Cities of France, about 7 Miles in Compass. The East-fide is water'd by feveral Streams which cleanfe the Streets, ferve a great many Water-Mills, and afterwards fall into the Seine, which runs by the South fide of the Town. There is a Bridge of Boats upon the Seine 270 Paces long, fo artfully contriv'd, that it rifes and falls with the Tide, and is pav'd like a Street. The City is defended by an old Caftle on the River; it has good Walls, large Ditches, Bulwarks and Ramparis; 6 fair Suburbs, 16 Gates, 13 Market-places, 136 Fountains, and 25 Patilh-Churches; the Cathedral is a valt Structure, the Quire thereof is lin'd with Capper, the whole of excellent Workmanship, both without out and within; it has three lofty Towers, one whereof is call'd the Butter Tower, becaufe it was built with the Money that the Archbishop George D'Amboisse gather'd from the People for giving them leave to eat Butter in Lent. In this Tower there is the greatest * Bell in France, fo * Orleans much (poke of by Travellers, and Bell. Call'd after the Name of the faid Archbishop; it is 13 Font high, 32 broad, 11 in Diameter, and weighs 40000 Pounds. The Tower call'd the Pyramid, is very artfully built with Wood, the Spire is cover'd with gilt Lead, has 200 Steps to it, and in the whole there are 600. Near the Quire there's the Picture of a Dragon, which from a neighbouring Wood deftroyed many of the People, but was conquer'd (as they pretend) by one of their Bilhops, meerly by throwing his Robe about its Neck, with which he led him to the Town like a Dog, where he was burnt. and his Alhes thrown into the River. The Bishop was attended by two Prisoners condemned to die, who were to have their Pardons for going with him, but one of them ran away; therefore the Archbishops of this City, and the Canons, have the Pri-vilege once a Year, viz. on Afcenfion day, to let at Liberty a condemned Prifoner.

Over the great Gate of the Church there is a Triumphal Arch in Honour of Henry the 4th, with Emhlems of his Victory over the Liguers, who are represented in Fetters gnawing gnawing their Chains, and the King of Spain ftanding by with a mournful Look.

There are 10 Dignitaries, 50 Canons, 8 Petty Canons, befides feveral Chaplains belonging to this Church, which is more regular and handfome than the Cathedral of Paris.

There is another Church in the pleafanteft Place of the City, that has two Windows opposite to one another, in Form of a Role, of curious Architecture; the one being built by a Master Architect, the other by his Servant; which last proving to be the best of the two, the Mafter kill'd him out of Envy, for which he was hang'd, and both were buried in the Quire. Here are many Palaces, befides flately Houses belonging to private Perfons. This City is about 68 Miles North-Weft from Paris.

Diepe is a well fortified Town on the Sea-Coaft, 25 Miles North from Roven or Roan, at the Mouth of the Aers, with one of the best Harbours in those Parts, capable of Ships of 500 Tuns, but of difficult Access; it is fortified with Bulwarks towards the Sea, a Fortrefs at the Suburb of Pollet, and a Castle, which with the rocky Mountains that lie on the South, make it a Place of good Strength. It is pretty large, and well built, inhabited by a great Number of Seamen, who are reckon'd very expert Mariners. They make curious Works in lvory; most of the Inhabitants were Protestants before the late Perfecution. The English and Dutch bombarded it in 1694. The

The Government of France is almost defpotical under a Prince stilled, The most Chriflian King, and Eldest Son of the Church. The Grown is hereditary to Males only, the Females being excluded by the Salick Law: The Assembly of the three States, wiz. Clergy, Nobility and Citizens, was in great Veneration formerly, and the Royal Authority thereby very much limited; but that Assembly not having been conven'd fince 1614, the Authority thereof is now suppres'd.

The Kingdom is divided into twelve Governments, over each of which is fet a Governor, fliled the King's Lieutenant General, or Superintendant, having like Power as the Lords Lieutenants in England.

There are feventeen Archbishops, and an hundred twenty-four Bilhops. The Air is very temperate, pleafant, and healthful, and the Soil extraordinary fruitful. The only eflablish'd Religion is the Roman, receiving all the Matters of Faith of the Council of Trent. The Proteflants were formerly allow'd the Exercise of their Religion by feveral Edicts granted by the French King, particularly that of Nants in 1598. by Henry the Fourth, and confirm'd by all his Succeffors ever fince; but the prefent King Lewis the Fourteenth by his Declaration of October 1685, abolish'd the faid Edict; whereupon follow'd the Deftruction of their Churches, and a violent Perfecution, which forc'd great Droves to leave the Kingdom, and feek Shelter in foreign Couptries.

Dover is feated among Rocks near the Sea" fide, opposite to Calais, more noted for the Conveniency of its Harbour, and the Paffage from thence to France (which is but one and twenty Miles) than either its Neatnels of Populousness. Formerly it was provided by Law, that no Perfon going out of the Kingdom in Pilgrimage, should take Shipping at any other Harbour : It is also one of the Cinque Ports, and moll of the Affairs relating t0 other Ports in general, are transacted here. The Caftle is pretty ftrong, wherein an old Table is hung up, which imports, that JHlius Cafar landed on that Part of the English Coaft. There are very lew other Ships but Packet Boars that put in here.

The Caffle is to large, that it looks like a little City, with firong Fortifications, and many Towers, which (as it were) threatens the Sea under it from a Hill, or rather from a Rock upon the Right Hand, which is on every Side rugged and freep but more effecially towards the Sea, where it rifes to a wonderful Height.

Canterbury, upon the River Stour, is Capital of the Province of Kent, a very ancient City, but much decayed from its former Splendor which it had when the Kings of Kent liv'd in it; it is not large, neither has it any Thing confiderable in it, but the Cathedral, which is well built, and one of the largeft in the Kingdom; as it was the richeft hefore that Henry the Eighth had caus'd all its Silver and Gold to be taken away. The Archbishop, wh³ who is Primate of all England, and a Peer of the Realm, has Right to call a National Synod, and likewife to crown the King, whofe perpetual Chaplain he is; before the Reformation he was by his Dignity the Pope's Legate in England, and had much greater Revenues than at prefent.

The Foreigners, viz. the Walloons and French, have much contributed to what Trade the City has now; the first being driven out of the Spanifs Netherlands for adhering to the Reformation, were permitted by Queen Elizubeth to come and fettle here : It was they that brought into this Kingdom the Art of Weaving Silk, which is now come to that Perfection, that their Silks equal, if not exceed any Foreign whatfoever. The Settlement of the French is only of late, viz. fince the last Perfecution under Lowis the 14th, but they are numerous, and very industrious, maintaining their own Poor, and living frugally : They are joyn'd with the Walloons, who have a large Place allow'd them under the Cathedral, and both to ether make a very Breat Congregation, and keep two Ministers of their own.

Chatham is famous for the Station of the Royal Navy; the Arfenal is to convenient, and to well fenc'd with good Forts, that there is not perhaps one more compleat in the World. The Town is joyn'd to Rachifter by one of the fineft, and beft Bridges in England.

London, the Capital of England, stands in a fruitfut Soil, upon a gentle Afcent joyning the River Thames ; which, with the Tide, brings up fuch a vaft Number of large Véffels to the City, filling it with Wealth from Ell Parts of the World, that it may at this Day difpute the Preeminence with all the Mart-Towns in Christendom. This River is fo shaded with Masts and Sails, that it feenis like a Wood. The City is fo beautified with Churches, and other godly Houfes, that one wou'd think Religion and Piety had made choice of it for a Place of Refidence; for it has 121 Churches, befides Holpitals, and that fine Nurfery for young Boys, call'd Chrift-Church Hofpital, which maintains about 600 Orphans, and about 1240 Poor People; and the late charitable Work in every Parilh, not only in London, but almost all over England, for the employing, and educating the Poor.

The Greatness of this City, the Multitude of its Inhabitants, Splendor of its Building⁵, the incredible Treafures brought in by its Trade and Commerce, render it, in my Opinion, the most confiderable in the Universe's to that what Jobn Jobnston of Aberdeen fays, ¹⁵ very applicable to it.

The chief Things remarkable in London, are the Tower, wherein are kept the Crown and Ornaments of the King's Coronation, and alfo a very curious Arfenal furnish'd with Arms for 80000 Men, all very neatly kepra The Royal Exchange, the finest in Europe; the Cathedral of St. Pauls, not inferior to St. Peters at Rome for its Structure and Greatnels, Weltminster Palace, wherein the Parliament affembles, which confifts of two Houfes, viz. the Higher and Lower; the one for the 1 ords Spiricual and Temporal, the other for the Commons. Weßminfter Hall, where the Courts of Juffice are, is very spacious and magnificent, being 279 Foot long, and 74 broad; here are hung all the Colours taken at Hoc. fadt from the French. Near it is Westminster-Abbey, or St. Peter's Church, of very curious Workmanlhip, Supported with Several Rows of fine Pillars, the Roof cover'd with Lead; it was filty Years building. Henry the Seventh (for a Burying place for himlelf and Children) huilt a Chapel (on the East Part of it) of a neat and admirable Contrivance; therein is his own most splendid Monument of folid Brass; there are also the Maufoleum's of all the Kings and Queens of England, and of leveral Noble and Illustrious Perfons.

The Bridge of London is most admirable, built of Free Stone, of fixteen large Arches, (befides the Draw-Bridge) which joins the great Burrough of Southwark to the City; it has a long and large Street upon it, with handfome Houfes on each fide, to that it may be reckon'd the finest and richest Bridge in Europe, and I may fay, of the World. Grescham-College is an old Building, wherein is a Room full of Rarities. Bedlam, Chelfea, and the new College at Greenwich, are all magnificent Buildings, and deferve a Traveller's View: The first is for Lunaticks and mad 4.

People, the feennd for ancient and difabled Soldiers and Officers, and the last for Seamen.

Cambridge is one of the two Universities of England, on the River Cam; 'tis divided into two Parts, and joyn'd by a Bridge; beyond which there is an old Castle, but now in Ruins, and Magdalen-College: On this fide of the Bridge (where the greater Part of the Town lies) there's a pleasant Prospect of the Form of the Streets, the Number of the Churches, and of fixteen fair Colleges: It may defervedly be term'd the Fountain of all Literature, Religion and Learning; nor is there any Thing wanting that can be requir'd in a most flourishing University.

York is the fecond City of England, being the fineft, and greatest Fence and Ornament of thefe Northern Parts; it is both pleafant, large and ftrong, adorn'd with fine Buildings, both publick and private, populous, rich, and an Archbilhop's See. The River Oufe runs through the City, and divides it into two Parts, joyn'd by a Stone-Bridge, which has one of the largest Arches I ever faw. The West Part of the City is less populous, and lies in a fquare Form, enclos'd partly with flately Walls, and partly with the River, and has but one Way to it, namely, by Mickel-Bar, which fignifies a great Street, from whence a broad line Street leads to the Bridge, with fine Gardens on each fide behind the Houfes, and the Fields for Exercise extended to the very Walls. The East Part of the P City,

City, where the Buildings are thick, and the Streets narrow, is ftrongly wall'd. On the South-East it is defended by a very deep and muddy Ditch, which runs by obscure Ways into the very Heart of the City, and has a Bridge over it, fo throng'd with Buildings on both fides, that a Stranger would miftake it for a Street; after which it falls into the Oufer at the Confluence of which there was a very ftrong Caftle to keep the Citizens in Awe; but it has been left to the Mercy of Time, ever fince fortified Places have grown in Difrepute among the English, as only fit for those who want Courage to meet the Enemy in the Field.

The Cathedral of St. Peter is a magnificent and curious Fabrick; near which without the Walls was a Noble Monaftery, nam'd St. Mary's, plentifully endow'd, but now it is converted into a Royal Palace, commonly call'd The Manour.

Newcaffle ftands upon the Tine, and is the Glory of all the Towns of the North, having a noble Haven, which is of that Depth, that it carries Veffels of very good Burthen, and of that Security, that they are in no Hazard of either Storms or Shallows. Its Situation is uneven, on the Northern Bank of the Tine, which is crofs'd by a very fair Bridge. The Town is beautified with four Churches, and defended by exceeding ftrong Walls, wherein are feven Gates, and a great many Tur rets. It is commended for its Situation and Plenty of Sea-Coal, fo ufeful in its felf, and to which fo great a Part of Britain and the Netberlands are indebted for their good Fires. The Suburb of Gates bead is joyn'd to the Town by the Bridge, and belongs to the Bifhop of Durham, where there's a pretty handfone Church.

Durbam stands upon an high Ground, and is very strong, but of no great Compass, lying in a kind of an Oval Form, enclos'd guite round by a River, except on the North Parr, and fortified with good Walls. In the South Part, where the River winds it felf back again, stands the Cathedral Church, which with its Spires and Tower-Steeple, makes a fine Shew. In the Heart of the Town is the Cafile, almost in the middle between two Stone-Bridges, the one on the East fide, the other on the Welt. From the Caltle Northward lies the Market-Place, and Sr. Nicholas's Church, from which there shoots out a Suburb to the North East for a good Way within a Winding of the River ; as likewife others on both fides beyond the River, leading towards the Bridges; each of which has its particular Church. At the very Bottom of the Caffle runs an excellent River for Fish, efpecially Salmon. The Bifhops of Durbam are reckon'd Counts Palatines, and have vaft Re-Venues.

Berwick is feated on the farther Banks of the Twede, and is the laft Town on that fide, and the beft fortified of all Great Britain, furrounded with an high Stone-Wall, ftrengthen'd With a deep Ditch, Bastions and Counter-P 2 icarp.

fcarp, fo that its Fortifications are fo ftrong and regular, that no Befiegers can hope to carry it without vaft Difficulty.

Edinberough, in regard of its uncommon Situation, the Goodness of the Air, the Fertility of the Soil, many of the Nobilities Seats all round it, being water'd with excellent Springs, and reaching from Eaft to Weft, a Mile in length, is justly counted the Metropolis of Scotland. It is ftrongly wall'd, adorn'd with many fine publick and private Buildings, well peopled, and much frequented by Reafon of the Advantage of the Sea, and of the neighbouring Port of Leith. On the Eastfide joining to the Holy. Rood Monastery, stands the Palace Royal, over which. (within a Park ftor'd with Game) hangs a double top'd Hill, call'd Arthur's Chair, fo call'd from Arthur King of Britain. On the Weft-fide there mounts up a Rock to a mighty Height, freep, and almost inaccessible, only on that fide which looks towards the Town, upon it flands the Callle, fo ftrongly fortified, that it is look'd upon impregnable, call'd by the Scots, The Maidens Caffle, because the Princess of the Blood Royal of the Pitts were kept here.

The City has fix Gates, the principal whereof towards the Eaft, was magnificently rebuilt in 1616, and adorn'd with Towers on each fide. Two Streets run along the whole length of the Town; the High Street from the Caffle to the Abbey (which they pretend is the broadeft in Europe, but are miftaken) is of late built of hewen Stone, fince by an an Act of the City Council they have been prohibited to build any more Houfes of Timber, eicher in the City or Suburbs, by Realon of the many Fires which have happen'd. In the middle of this City is the Cathedral dedicated to St. Giles, built of hewen Stone, and adorn'd with Stone-Pillars; it is fo large, that it is divided into three Churches, each whereof has its Parish. There are besides, the Throne-Church, the Collegiate-Church of the Holy Trinity, that of St. Mary Magdalen; to which I may add the Hofpitals of Sr. Thomas and Hierots; in the first the poorer Sort of Inhabitants are maintain'd very handfomely, and have their own proper Chaplain. The fe-cond is a flately Fabrick like a Palace; in the inner Frontefpiece is the Statue of the Founder, and round about the Buildings are very pleafant Gardens, adorn'd with large Walks and Gteens : Ir is a Nurfery for Boys wherein the Poorer Citizens Children have their Education, till they be fit for the publick Schools and Colleges.

Near the Cathedral is the Parliament Houle, franding in a great Court, which on one fide is enclos'd with the Upper and Lower Exchange, and with a Tract of very frately Buildings; here is nne of the higheft Houfes perhaps in the World, mounting feven Stories above the Parliament Court; and being built upon the Defcent of a Hill, the back Part is as far below it; fo that from the Bottom to Top, one Stair cafe afcends fourteen Stories. In the Middle of the Court is the Statue of P 3 King

King Charles the Second in Brass, erected upon a stately Pedestal at the Charge of the City. On the South fide is the College of King James the Sixth, endowed with all the Privileges of an University. The Precinds are very large, and the whole divided into three Courts, adorn'd on all fides with excellent Buildings: They have publick Schools and a Common Hall wherein Divinity, Hebrew, and the Mathematicks are taught. The Royal Palace has four Courts; the outer Court, which is as big as all the reft, has four print cipal Entries; it is on all fides bounded with lovely Gardens; on the South is the Park, which has great Variety of medicinal Plants. The Entry of the Palace is adorn'd with Pillars of hewen Stone, with a Cupola in Form of a Crown above it; the Fore-part is terminated by four high Towers: The inner Court has Piazza's round it, all of hewen Stone ; but above all the long Gallery is molt remarkable, being adorn'd with the Pictures of all the Kings of Scotland, from Fergus the Firft.

Linlitbgow is a Royal Borough, well built, and accommodated with Fountains, together with a ftately Town-houfe for the Meeting of the Gentry and Citizens, and a Harbour at Blacknefs; but its greateft Ornament is the King's Houfe, which ftands upon a rifing Ground that runs almoss into the Middle of the Loch, and looks like an Amphitheater, having, as it were, Terrafs. Walks, and a Descent from them, but upon the Top where the Caftle ftands, there's a Plain. The Court has Apartments like Towers upon the four Corners, and in the midft of it is a ftately Fountain adorn'd with feveral curious Statues, the Water of it rifes to a good height: Near the Palace upon the level ftands the Church, which is a curious Piece of Building of fine Stone.

Glasgow is the chief City after Edinborougb, in respect of its Largenes, Buildings, Trade, and Wealth, fcated on the East-Banks of the River Clyde, which carries Vessels of small Burthen up to the very Tower; but New Glafgow (which flands on the Mouth of the Clyde) is a Haven capable of receiving Veffcls of the largest Size. Most Part of this City stands on a Plain, and is almost Four fquare; in the very Middle of it (where the Talbooth flands, a very flately Building of hewen Stone) four principal Streets croffing each other, divide the City, as it were, into four equal Parts; in the highest of which stands the Cathedral-Church call'd St. Mungos, confifting indeed of two Churches, one whereof is over the other : The Architecture of the Pillars is very exact and curious, as well as the Towers. Near the Church is the Archbishop's Caffle, fenced with a Wall of hewen Stone; but the greatest Ornament is the College separated from the reft of the Town by an exceeding high Wall, the Precincts whereof are enlarg'd with feveral Acres of Ground lately purchas'd.

St. Andrews

St. Andrews is an Archiepifeopal City, baving a Profpect into the open Sea, and a pretty good Harbour.

Ungm King of the Piëls granted it to God and St. Andrew, that it fhould be the Head and Mother of all the Churches in the Piëlijh Dominions; and then an Episcopal See was plac'd here, whose Bishops, as all the rest of the Kingdom of Scotland, were confectated by the Archbishop of York, till at the Intercession of King James the Third (by Reason of the frequent Wars between the Scots and English) Pope Sistus the Fourth conflituted the Bishop of St. Andrews Primate and Metropolitan of all Scotland.

Here was formerly a firong Cafile, a Cathedral, and Monaftery, but there are now but Ruins; the new Church is the chief, wherein is a very flately Monument of Archbishop Sharp; but the great Ornament of this Town is the three Colleges, viz. St. Salvador (call'd the New College) Leonard College, and the Old College, to which has been added of late a Professor of the Mathematicks.

Dundee is feated in a pleafant Plain, adoro'd with excellent Buildings of all Sorts; it has two Churches and a high Steeple, a Harbour for Ships of Burthen, and a confiderable Trade with Strangers: The Inhabitants are generally rich, and they who fall to decay have a large Holpital provided for them.

Aberdeen is divided into two Parts, wiz. the Old and the New; the Old is the Bilhop's Seat, and has a flately Cathedral. The King's College College feated on the South fide of the Town, is very neat, it has feveral Professions, viz, for Divinity, Civil Law, Physick, Philosophy, and for Languages.

New Aberdeen is about a Mile from the Old, it is the Capital of the Sheriffdom' and the Seat of the Sheriff for the Tryal of Caufes; it much exceeds the reft of the Cities of the North of Scotland in Bigness, Trade and Beauty; the Air is wholfome, and the Inhabitants well bred; the Streets are pav'd with a very hard Stone like Flint, the Houfes very beautiful, and generally four Stories high or more. which having for the most Gardens or Or. chards behind them, make the whole Town look like a Wood at a Diftance. The greatest Ornament of this City is its College, call'd The Mareshallian Academy, which, besides a Primary Pro'effor, has four of Philofophy, one of Divinity, and one of the Mathematicks, The Cathedral of St. Nicholas is built with Free Stone, and cover'd with Lead ; they have alto an Almshoufe for the maintenance of fuch Inhabitants that are old and poor, with three Hospitals founded by feveral Persons. The City is built upon three Hills, but the greateft Part upon the highest. At the West end of the City is a little round Hill, from the Foot where. of breaks out a Fountain of clear Water, and in the Middle bubbles out another Spring call'd The Aberdonian Spaw, coming near the Spaw-Water in the Bilhoprick of Liege, both in Tafte and Quality.

Elguin

Elguin in Murray shire, is a Royal Borough, it has a flately Church, it is large and populous, of great Trade in Buff or Doe-Skins, which are very cheap here.

Inverness upon the River Ness, was formerly the Seat of the Kings of Scotland, and has a Caftle flanding on a pleafant Hill, with a fine Prospect into the Fields and Town; near which is a Bridge built over the River Neft, confifting of feven Arches, all of hewen Stone. It has a Harbour for small Veffels; there are two Churches, one for the English, the other for the Irifh, or Highlanders, who inhabit these Parts, and are a very barbarous, mischievous, and Warlike People, of firm and compact Bodies, of great Strength, fwift of Foor, highminded, born, as it were, for the Exercifes of War, or rather for Robbery, very revenge. ful; they wear strip'd Mantles, or Plads of divers Colours, with their Hair thick and long, and a little Bonnet; they get their Living by Hunting, Fishing, Fowling and Stealing; they are arm'd with a long Sword, and a Target or Buckler : These being divided into Fansilies, which they call Clans, what with plundering and murthering, they commit fuch barbarous Outrages, that their favage Cruelty, has made this Law neceffary, that if one of any Clan has committed a Trefpafs, whoever of that Clan chances to be taken, shall repair the Damage, or fuffer for it. They call themfelves Albinnichs, and speak Irifly, which shews their Extraction to be from the Irifh, Their Dict is very flender and ordinary ; I have feen them them incamp in their own Country, fometimes join four or fix together, and make a Hole in the Ground which they fill with Water, and after having mingled Oatmeal and ftirr'd it up and down with their long Horn-Spoons, drank heartily of this Broth, neither had they any other Food for feveral Days.

St. John's Town is a pretty little Place, neatly fituated; and though fome of the Churches are delac'd, yet they don't want Beauty ; it is pretty populous, and of a good Trade : It is fo divided by the River Tay, that almost every Street is inhabited by a feveral Trade aparr. and is furnish'd every Tide with Commodities from Sea, by their finall Veffels on the Tay. Not far from hence on the bank of the Ratra, there's a Cave near Stany's Caffle, whole Nature feems worthy my taking Notice of ; for the Water diffilling by drops from a natural Vault, is prefently turn'd into Pyramidal Stones; and if People did not take Care to clear the Vault now and then, the whole Space in a little Time wou'd be fill'd up to the Top with them. Now these Stones are of a middle Nature, between Ice and hard Stones, for they are friable, and never arrive to the Solidity of Marble.

Sterling is feated on a fteep Rock, overtop'd with a Caffle of great Strength, beautify'd with many new Buildings: The Place is ftrong and well fortified; the Air is very fharp, and the Country thinly inhabited, therefore infefted with very fietce Wolves, which do a great deal of Damage, not only in deftroying the Cattle, Cattle, but even fome of the Inhabitants themfelves; fo that the Sheriff and refpective Inhabitants are bound by Act of Parliament to go a hunting thrice every Year to deftroy the Wolves and their Whelps.

Carlifle is a ftrong Town having a good Caftle, befides which it has nothing remarkable. It is fituate in England towards the Frontiers of Scotland.

Chefter is a City pleafantly fituated in the Weft Part of England; it has four Gates an fwering to the four Winds; a pleafant River abounding with Fifh, runs along by the Walls; it has a fine Harbour on the South fide; it is a Place of great Trade, having always a great Concourfe of People in it, that go and come from Ireland.

The Kingdom of England is a famous and hereditary Monarchy, it feldom admits any Interregnum, and is free from the Misfortunes of elective Kingdoms; for by the Concurrence of the Lords and Commons, it has the main Advantage of Atiftocracy and Democracy, without partaking of the Difadvantages of either. In fhort, this Monarchy affords great Happines to the Subjects, and referves enough for the Prerogative of any King or Queen, who will use their People as Subjects, not as Slaves. There are but two Archbilhops, that of Canterbury, and that of York; 24 Bilhops, two famous Universities, Oxford and Cambridgen which fot magnificent Buildings, rich Endowments, ample Privileges, as alfo Number of Students, Libraries, and Learned Men, are inferior inferior to none, or rather not to be equall'd in the World.

The Air is fweet and temperate, the Cold, during Winter, is not piercing, nor the Heat in Summer forching, as in other Countries under the fame Paraliel.

The Kingdom of Scotland being at prefent join'd to England, and both now compoling but one Kingdom under the Name of Great Britain, I thall be filent as to its Government, and only fay, that its Air is extreme cold, the Soil much lefs fettile than England, Wheat very rare there, and very little Fruit in the Country, but a Multitude of Deer and tame Cattle. The North Part more defert, the Eaft more peopled, the South more fertile, and the Weft more abounding in Lakes.

Dublin is the Capital City of Ircland, and the most noble Emporium of the Kingdom; here the Courts of Judicature are held, and the Parliament meets: It is well wall'd, neatly built, very populous, and pleafantly fituated, famous for Trade, and the fweet Plains, Oaky Wnods, and fine Parks about it. It is fortified towards the South with Ramparts, and on the other fide with a Stone Wall : It has fix Gates which open into large Suburbs on all fides ; the King's Caftle flands upon a rifing Ground, well fortified with Ditches and Towers, and provided with a good Arfenal. Over against St. Andrew's Church stands a fine College dedicated tn the Holy Trinity. In St. Thomas's Suburbs there is a noble Abbey of the fame Name. In St. Patrick's Suburbs utbs ftands the Archhishop's Palace, known by the Name of St. Sepulcher, with a stately Church dedicated to St. Patrick, very fine within for its Stone Pavement, and arch'd Roof, and without for its high Steeple.

This City has the Benefit of a famous Harbour, and for Trade, and Concourle of Merchants it is a Rival to London; it has Hills on the South, Plains on the Weft, and the Sea just by it on the East, with the River Liffy on the North.

Down is an ancient flourishing Town, a Bifhop's See, remarkable for the Tomb of St. Patrick, Briget, and Columba, upon which this Diffick is writ.

Hi tres in Duno tumulo tumulantur in uno, Brigida, Patricius, atque Colamba pius.

This Monument was demolified in Henry the Eighth's Time by one of his Lord's Deputies; and the Religious have much contended about the Burying-place of St. Patrick; those of Down will have it among them, from the Authority of the faid Vetles; those of Armagb fix it among themfelves, from a Paffage in St. Bernard; the Monks of Glastenbury in England have challeng'd it, and offer'd as Proof, the Records and Monuments of their Abbey; and lastly, the Scots affirm him not only to be born near Glasgow in Scotland, but buried there also at Kirk Patrick.

Kilkenny

Rilkenny is a neat, and fair built Town, very plentiful, and exceeding all the Inland Towns of the Kingdom; it is divided into the Irifh and Englifh Town; the Irifh is as it were the Suburbs, where frands Canie's Church; the Englifh is much newer, wall'd on the Weft, and lortified by a Cafile. Lower Down, upon the fame River, frands a little fortified Town, call'd Thomas Town.

Cork is of an Oval Form, enclos'd with Walls, and with the Channel of the River Lee, which alfo croffes it, and is not to be enter'd, but over the Bridges, lying along as it were, in one direct Street, from one Bridge to another. It is a populous little Trading Town, and much reforted to, but fo befet with Rebel Enemies on all fides, that they are oblig'd to keep conftant Watch, as if the Town was continually befieged; and dare not marry their Daughters to any in the Country, but contract one with another among themfelves, whereby all the Citizens are related to one another in fome Degree.

Limerick is the Head City of Munfter, encompais'd by the famous River Shannon, which divides its Stream, and embraces it. It is a Bishop's See, and the great Emporium of the Province of Munfter, fortified with a strong Castle; it is divided into two Towns, viz. the Uppermost where the Casthedral stands with the Castle, and has two Gates, to each of which a fair Stone Bridge leads, strengthenthe With Bulwarks, and little Draw-Bridges, one of which leads Weltwards, the other Eaftwards; the Lower, which is join'd to this, fortified with a Wall and a Callle, with a Fore gate at the Entrance. There is nothing remarkable in it.

The Government of this Kingdom is by one Supreme Officer, call'd Lord Lieutenant, or Lord Deputy; no Vice-roy in Europe is invefted with greater Power: He is allow'd a Privy-Council to advife with upon all Occafions.

As for the Laws of this Kingdom, they owe their Origin to the English Parliament and Council, and must first pass the Great Seal of England in the Absence of the Lord Licutenant: The Supreme Power is lodg'd in the Lords Justices.

The Air of this Country is almost of the fame Nature of those Parts of England that lie under the fame Parallel, only different in this, that in feveral Places of this Kingdom, it is of a more großs and impure Temper by Reafon of the many Lakes and Marshes that are here, which fend up fuch a Quantity of Vapours, that the Air is thereby corrupted, which occasions Fluxes, Rheums, and suchlike Diffempers, to which the Inhabitants are often subject : They are partly Protestants, and partly Papifts.

Lancaster (quasi Lon Castrum) fo call'd from the River Lon and an old Castle that stood there, is a Town not well peopled, where of the Inhabitants are all Husbandmen; there's upon a Hill a strong well built Castle, and a Church

Church, the only one in Town, where the Monks had a Cell; below this there's a fine Bridge over the Lon.

Coventry is a very large Town, the Walls and Towers thereof were demolifh'd after the Reftoration by the Command of King Charles the Second, the Gates only being left ftanding, by which one may guels at the Strength and Beauty of the Town. King Edward the Fourth, for their Difloyalty, took the Sword from the Mayor, and feiz'd their Liberties and Franchifes, which they redeem'd for 500 Marks. In Memory of Leofrick, or Lurick, and Godiva his Countefs, their Pictures Were fet up in the Windows of Trinity Church, with this Infectiption,

I Lurick for the Love of thee, Do fee Coventry Toll free.

And a Proceffion or Cavalcade is still yearly made in Memory of the faid Godiva, with the naked Figure of a Maid painted; representing her r ding on Horfe-back through the City, to obtain the faid Freedom for it. They have a ft tely Crofs for Beauty and Magnificence, inferior to none in England.

Warwick ftands upon a Hill, which is one entire Rock of Free Stone, cut of which were taken the Stones that were imploy'd in all the publick Buildings that adorn the Town: Each of the four Ways to it lead you thro' a Rock by a Religious Houfe, and O through through Streets which all meet in the Center of the Town. The Walls and Cellars are made in the Rock; and the De'cent every Way keeps it clean under it. On the South fide is a fruitful Champaign Country, and on the North Groves, Woods and Parks. Its Church was a noble Structure built of Free Stone, but lately burnt down, as well as a great Part of the Town, but the laft was lately rebuilt much finer than before.

The Caftle is a noble and delightful Seat, the Height of the Rock on which it flands, is 80 Foot; but on the North-fide it flands even with the Town. In it are flill to be feen the famous Guy Earl of Warwick's Sword, and other Accoutrements. The Town is adom'd with two publick Buildings, a Country Hall, and a Market-houle: It is supplied with Water brought in Fipes from Springs half a Mile off.

Stratford is a pretty little Market Town; the Church was Col egiate, and the College is ftill ftanding. In the Chancel of the Cathedral lies William Shakefpear, a Native of this Place, who has given a Proof of his Genius in the 48 Playshe has left behind him; his Tombltone has this Infeription,

Good Friend, for Jefus fake forbear To dig the Dust inclosed here; B'efs'd be the Name that spare these Stones, And curs'd be he that moves my Bones.

Oxford

Oxford is a delicate and most beautiful City, whether we confider the Neatness of its private Buildings, or the Stateliness of its publick Structure, or its healthy and delightful Situation; for the Plains on which it stands are, as it were, wall'd in with woody Hills, which keeping out on one fide the unwholfom Southwind, on the other the tempestuous Wess, admit only the purifying East, and the North that disperfes unhealthy Vapours. Therein is a Famous University, the Scat of the English Muses, the Eye, and very Soul of the Nation, the most celebrated Fountain of Wisdom and Learning, from which Religion, Learning and good Manners are diffus'd thro' the whole Kingdom.

The Colleges are in Number 16, befides 8 Halls, all fairly built, and furnish'd with excellent Libraries, which do fo raile the Credit and Efteem of Oxford, that it may be justly thought to exceed all other Universities in the World. It is far from standing in need of a Panegyrick, having already gain'd the univerfal Esteem and Admiration of the World.

Salabury is a large, populous Place abounding with Plenty of all Things, especially Fish, adorn'd with a very fine Council-house of Wood, which stands in a spacious well furnish'd Market-place. The great Church is a stately Pile of Building, whose high Steeple and double cross isses by its venerable Grandeur strikes the Spectator with a facred Joy. It was built in the Space of 43 Years, upon which these Verses have been compos'd.

Mire

Mira canam, foles quot continet annus, in una Tam numerofa (ferunt) æde fenestra micat, Marmoreasque capit fusas tot ab arte columnas Comprensas boras quot vagus annus habet, Totq; patent portæ, quot mensibus annus abunilat, Res mira, at verd res celebrata side.

For they fay, this Church has as many Windows as Days in the Year; as many Pillars and Pilasters as there are Hours; and as many Gates as Months.

On the South-fide of the Church is the Cloifler as great, and of as fine Workmanship as any in England, the which the Bishop's flately Palace is join'd. On the North fide stands apart from the Cathedral, a very strong builts and high Bell-Tower. This Church maintains a Dean, a Chanter, a Chancellor, a Treasufurer, and 33 Prebendaries; some of whom (call'd Canons Refidents) have very good Houfes not far from the Church, and all are inclosed with a Wall apart from the Town.

About 6 Miles Northward from the Town is to be feen infana Subfructio, a wild Structure, commonly call'd Stone-henge; for within a fort of a Trench are plac'd huge unhewen Stones in three Circles one within another, after the manner of a Crown, fome of which are 28 Foot in Height, and 7 in Breadth; the Number of them is uncertain, for I have counted them my felf, and feveral of the Company, but all of us found, each Time we counted, a different Number: It is reckon'd among the Wonders of the Land, for it is unaccountable how how fuch Stones fhould come there, fince all the circumjacent Country wants Stones for Building: But I am of Opinion, that thefe Stones are not natural, but artificial, being made of fine Sand, cemented together by a glutinous Sort of Matter, like fome Monuments I faw in feveral other Places, and like the four Pillars of the Steeple of Die in Daupbiné, belonging to the Cathedral, each above 200 Foot high, and all four of one only Stone each.

Portfinouth is a very ftrong Place ; in Time of War it is very populous, but otherwife, in Time of Peace; it has a Church of good ancient Work, and an Hospital, which they call God's House. This Town, as to the Extent, Strength and Magnificence of the Land fortifications, as well as what belongs to the Marine Alfairs, is reckon'd the principal Place for laying up the Royal Navy, as being furnish'd on Shore with Docks, both wet and dry, Storehoufes, Rope-yards, Materials and Necessaries of all Kind for Building, Repairing, Rigging, Arming, Victualling and compleat Fitting to Sea, Ships of the First Rate. It has also Dwelling houses, and ample Accommodation for the Commiffioners and fubordinate Officers, and Master-Artifans, needful for the constant attending, and executing both Day and Night-Services of the Navy in this Port, both in Peace and War. At the Entrance of the Port they are building a Fortrefs, which will fecure the Harbour, the Plan whereof is an ac. complifh'd Work for Strength; there's Room enough to plant roo Cannons upon it.

 Q_3

Winchefter

Winchefter is a pretty populous Place, well water'd by the divided Streams of the River, extending long-ways from Eaft to Weft, and contains about two Miles within the Circuit of its Walls, which have fix Gates, the Paffage to each, for a confiderable Way, being Suburbs.

At the South-fide of the Weft-Gate ftands an ancient Caffle, which has been often befieg'd, but never fo ftraitly as when Maud the Emprefs maintain'd it againft King Stephen; at laft having caus'd the Report to be fpread, that fhe was dead, fhe put her felf into a Coffin to deceive the Enemy, and was fo cartied off fafe.

Arthur's round Table hangs up here, as the People believe; but according to what I cou'd obferve, it appears to be of much later Date. For in former Ages, when the Military Exercifes, call'd Turnaments, (made ufe of to train up their Soldiers) were much in Fashion, they had those Kind of round Tables, that there might be no Dispute of Precedency between the Combatants; and this feems to be a very ancient Custom. For the old Gauls did use to fit at a round Table with their Armour-bearers standing at their Backs holding their Shields.

The Cathedral Church, upon the Expulsion of the Monks, had a new Foundation of a Dean and twelve Prebendaries; at the Eastfide of which stands a spacious Palace belonging to the Bishop, fortified with several Turrets, almost surrounded with the River, and reaching ing to the City Walls. In the South Suburbs, is a neat College, in which are maintain'd very handfomely, a Warden ten Fellows, and two Mafters, with fome others.

Windfor has fo pleafant a Situation, that fcarce any Royal Palace can be more agreeable; for from a high Hill rifing with a gentle Afcent, it has an admirable Profpect round about; its Front over-looks a long and wide Valley, chequer'd with Corn-Fields and Meadows, cover'd on each fide with Groves, and water'd by the gentle Thames.

The Castle in bigness is equal to a little City, ftrengthen'd with Ditches, and Towers of square Stone. It is divided into two Courts, that which looks towards the East, contains the Royal Palace; the Contrivance of its Buildings is to stately, that nothing can be more magnificent. On the North fide where it looks down towards the River, there is a most plealant Terrass-Walk to the Entrance of the Castle, from whence is the Prospect of the Thames, of a fine new Canal, and of the Country quite round about as far as one can fee.

The outward Court has at the Entrance a flately Chapel confectated by King Edward the Third to the Virgin, and to St. George of Cappadocia, for the Encouragement of Military Vertue, and for the adorning it with Honours, Rewards and Glory, he inflituted the moft Noble Society of Knights, from his own Garter, given as a Word in Battle that prov'd fuccefsful, ftil'd, Knights of the Garter: They wear on their left Leg a little below the Knee, Q4 a blue a blue Garter, carrying this Motto embror dered in Letters of Gold in French on it.

Hony foit, qui mal y pense. .

It is faften'd with a Gold Buckle. Ab ut their Necks they wear a blue Ribbon, at the End of which hangs the Image of St. George, upon whole Day the Installations of new Knights are commonly celebrated; they are in Number 26, of which the Kings of England are Sovereigns.

On the left fide of the Chapel are the Houles of the Warden nr Dean, and of twelve Prebendaries. On the right fide is a Building where twelve aged Soldiers, Gentlemen born, are maintain'd, who wear conftantly a Scarlet Gown reaching down to their Ancles, with a Purple Mantle over it, and are bound to be at Divine Service, and to offer up their Prayers to God Almighty daily for the Knights of the Order. The Caffle is adorn'd with all Sorts of magnificent Furniture. St. George's Hall is not to be equall'd, as well for its Bignels, as for the extraordinary Pieces of Painting; and the little Chapel near it wants no Addition. The Town has nothing remarkable in it.

This Place belong'd formerly to the Monks of Westminster, but William the Conqueror annex'd it to the Crown, as appears by these Words of his :

"With the Confent and Favour of the ve-"netable Abbot of Westminster, I have enter'd "into

"into a Composition about Windfor Castle's be-"ing in Possession of the Crown, because the "Place feems commodious by the nearnels of the River, the Forest fit for Hunting, and many other Particulars therein convenient for Kings; being likewise a Place for the "King's Entertainment; in Lieu whereof I "have granted them Workendune and Ferings.

Hampton. Court is a Royal Palace, and a very magnificent Structure, built by Cardinal Wool-Jey, purely to fhew his great Wealth; enlarg'd and almost finish'd by Henry the Eighth. It has five large Courts let round with neat and exceeding curious Buildings; but the Additions made to it by the late King William of glotious Memory, do fo far excel what it was be. fore, that it plainly shews what vast Advancements Architecture receiv'd fince that Time. The Gardens also are improv'd to a wonderful Degree, not only in the Walks, but likewife with fine green Houles, having Stoves under them, fo artificially contriv'd, that all foreign Plants are there preferv'd in gradual Heat, fuitable to the Climates of their refpective Countries. In fhort, the whole feenis to be conttiv'd with fo much Magnificence, that (when 'tis finish'd) the noblest Palaces must fall short of it.

The Isle of Man lies in the Irish Sea, about half Way between England and Ireland; the Air is very cold and sharp, being exposed on every fide to the bleak, piercing Winds from the Sea: The Soil owes its Fertility in a great Measure, Measure, to the Care and Industry of the Inhabitants, who are a Mixture of Irish and English, with some Scots, and are called Manksmen, who in general have a very good Character. The ordinary Sort of People retain much of the Irish in their Language, and Way of Living, but those of the better Rank strive to imitate the English. In one Thing they are all peculiarly happy, viz. That all litigious Proceedings and Law-Suits are banish'd from among them, all Differences being specially determin'd by certain Judges call'd Deemsters, and that without Writing or Fees; if the Casebe found intricate, then 'tis referr'd to '12 Men, whom they term, The Keys of the Island.

This Island formerly belong'd to the Scots, and in it the Bilhop of the Isles had his Cathedral, but now the whole, together with the Advowfon, belongs to the Earls of Derby, who are commonly flin'd, Lords of Man, though Kings in effect, they having all kind of Power and Jurifdiction over the Inhabitants, but fill as a Fief under the Sovereignty of the Crown of Great Britain.

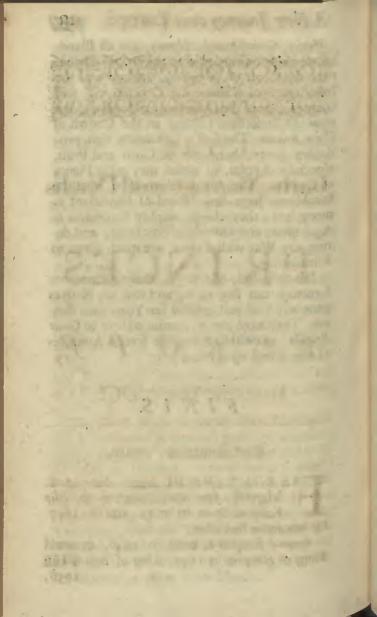

The Isle of Wight is not far from Portsmouth, the Air whereof is connted pure and wholfom, and is generally reckon'd a pleafant and fruitful Spot of Ground. It was once honour'd (as the Isle of Man) with the Title of Kingdom; for Henry Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, was crown'd King of Wight by Henry the 6th in the Year 1445, but the Title died with himfelf about two Years after, and it is now reckon'd only as Part of Hampshire, and is govern'd in like-manner as other lefter Islands.

Jerfey, Garnefey and Aldernay, are all Iflands fituate near one another in the Britifb Chanel near the Coaft of Normandy, and were of the Inheritance of William the Conqueror, and counted Part of the Dukedom of Normandy, but now the Poffeffion belongs to the Crown of Great Britain. The Soil is lufficiently rich, producing great Abundance of Corn and Fruit, efpecially Apples, of which they make Plenty of Cyder. The Air is fo wholfom, that the Inhabitants have little Need of Phyficians among 'em; they chiefly employ themfelves in Agriculture and knitting of Stockings; and during any War with France, are much given to Privateering.

It is observable of Garnfey, that no venomous Creature can live in it, and that the Natives generally look younger by ten Years that they are. They have always continued firm to Great Britain, notwithstanding the several Attempts of the French upon them.
